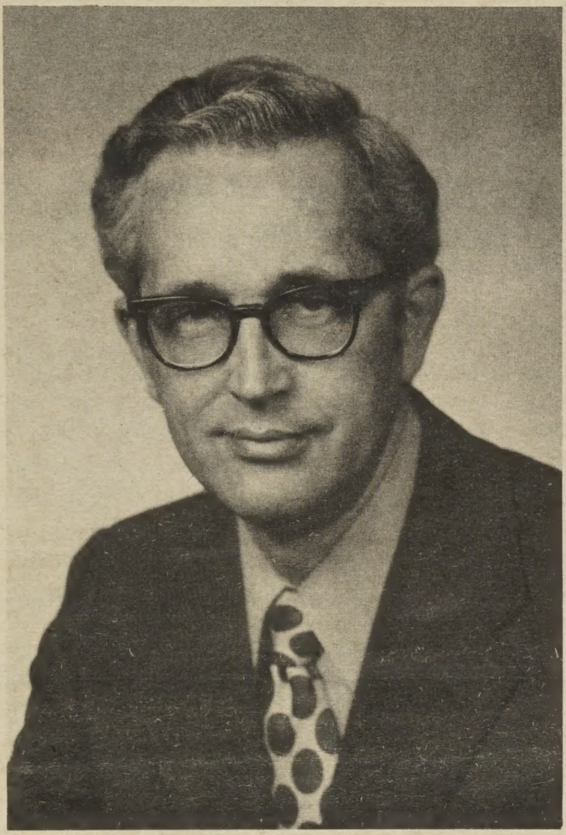
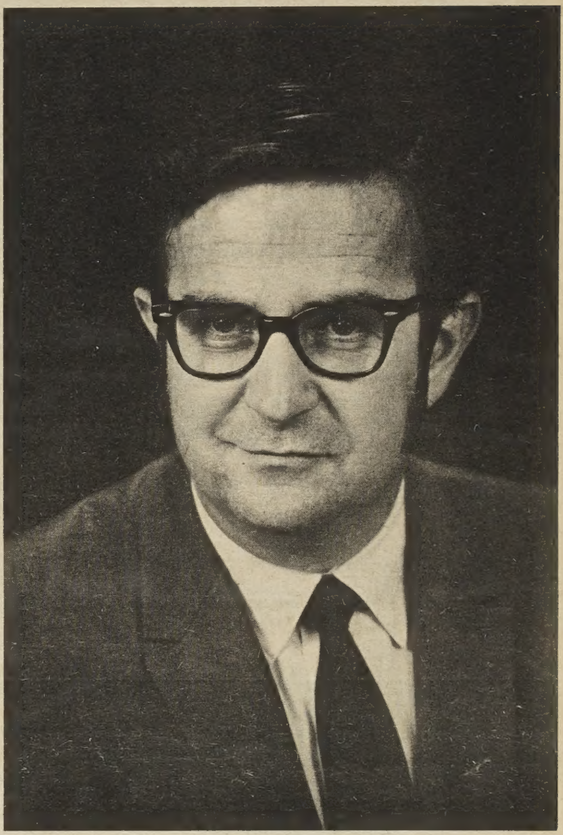
Weaver-Lapp to Be Provost-Dean Team



Henry D. Weaver Jr., provost-elect



John A. Lapp, dean-elect

Dr. Henry D. Weaver Jr. will be provost and Dr. John A. Lapp will be academic dean, beginning July 1, 1972. The appointments were made by the Board of Overseers at its December 20-21 meeting.

Weaver, 43, who has been acting dean since July 1, 1970, will assume the post currently held by Dr. Carl Kreider, who will be on sabbatical leave next year teaching economics at International Christian University, Tokyo.

Lapp, 38, is executive secretary for the peace section of Mennonite Central Committee, a post he has held since 1969 while on leave of absence from Eastern Mennonite College. At EMC he has been professor of history.

The appointments of the two men complete the six-man administrative team under Dr. J. Lawrence Burkholder, who was inaugurated president last fall.

Native of Virginia

Weaver, a native of Harrisonburg, Va., received his education in the fields of organic and physical chemistry at George Washington University and the University of Delaware. Before joining the Goshen College faculty in 1957, he taught at Eastern Mennonite College, Harrisonburg, Va., six years (1951-57) and the University of Virginia. In 1964-65 he taught at San Marcos University, Lima, Peru, under the Ford Foundation and Inter-American Development Bank, and in 1969-70 he was Fulbright Lecturer at Tribhuvan University, Kathmandu, Nepal.

Weaver has directed research at Goshen College since 1964, was instrumental in setting up the trimester calendar and the 14-week Study-Service Trimester abroad in 1968, and has directed international education programs in ten countries where GC has sent students. He has been a member of the board of Mennonite Broadcasts since 1956 and has served as its director for the production of 30-second radio and TV spots. For the 11-member Council of Mennonite Colleges he served part-time 1965-68 to develop and operate year abroad programs at seven locations, three summer programs, and two service-study programs.

Weaver is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry D. Weaver, of 1088 College Avenue, Harrisonburg, Va.

Mrs. Weaver is the former Mary Eby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Eby, of Parkersburg, Pa. She is a graduate of Goshen College and a registered medical technologist. The Weavers are the parents of a son and three daughters.

History Scholar

Lapp is a native of Lansdale, Pa., and received his education in European and American history at Eastern Mennonite College, Case Western Reserve University, and University of Pennsylvania. He returned to EMC for a teaching post in 1956. In 1962 he was named chairman of its department of history and division of social sciences. His doctoral dissertation will be published later this year under the title, The Mennonite Church in India, 1897-1962.

Interested in peace and social concerns, Lapp has been a member of several Mennonite churchwide committees, edited a book, Peacemakers in a Broken World, and written, since 1964, a monthly commentary on world news for Christian Living magazine. He has traveled to East Asia and the Middle East to observe peacemaking opportunities for the Mennonite Church. In 1970 he was a member of the Baptist-Mennonite delegation to visit Baptist congregations in the Soviet Union.

Lapp is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Lapp, of Route 1, Lansdale.

Mrs. Lapp is the former Alice Weber, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. Franklin Weber, of Lititz, Pa. She is a B.A. and M.A. graduate in English, a former schoolteacher of several public high schools and a former part-time faculty member of Eastern Mennonite College. The Lapps are the parents of a son and two daughters.

Tuition Stabilized for '72-'73

Full-time students will pay the same tuition in 1972-73 as they did in 1971-72. It is the first time since 1960-61 that tuition has not been raised at GC.

An increase of $25 a trimester in room and board will go into effect September, 1972, to cover inflation in costs of food, utilities, and services.

Comparison of inclusive fees for full-time students living in residence halls is:

	1971-72	1972-73
Fall trimester	$ 1150	$ 1175	(increase of $25 in cost of room and board)
Winter trimester	1150	1175	(increase of $25 in cost of room and board)
One spring term	240	245	(increase of $5 in cost of room and board for one 3 1/2 week term)
Total	$ 2540	$ 2595

The action to stabilize tuition was passed by the Board of Overseers at its December meeting.

Students May Choose 'Study And Work' to Pay for College

Beginning in September, 1972, Goshen College will offer a program of study with local employment to help its students pay for their education.

In the new Study-and-Work program, (SAW), a student follows a careful arrangement of trimesters with work during some and full-time study during others. With a couple other students, he will take his turn in rotation in working at a full-time job in a local factory or business.

The job arrangements and placement of students in Elkhart county businesses and industries will be taken care of by the College's office of career and vocational counseling.

Significant Earnings Under SAW

If a student chooses to complete college in four years under SAW, he can earn a significant amount of money to pay tuition, room and board, and book expenses, with only a modest amount required from personal or family resources.

If he stretches college over five years, he can earn enough to pay all his tuition, room and board, and book costs.

Policies to Be Set

From January to April a college committee will work on basic policies on how SAW will operate and talk to a few key employers in the county. Already preliminary visits with a selection of firms have shown them positive to SAW.

From late April through the summer, many employers in the county will be visited to line up specific jobs to launch the program in September. Students now at Goshen College will indicate their interest in joining SAW sometime during the current trimester.

A major advantage of SAW is: it makes possible a private college education at Goshen to those with limited personal and family resources. SAW reduces the costs so that education at Goshen is competitive with the tax-supported institutions.

Second, work experience in college years is educationally sound and should be offered to students as part of their curriculum. Many college students today have never had the experience of holding down a real

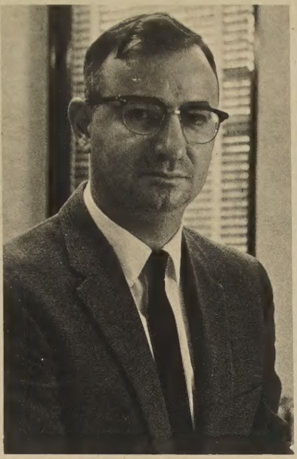
Shenk Is Director of SAW and Career, Vocational Center

J. B. Shenk, currently leader of the Study-Service Trimester in Haiti, has been appointed director of career and vocational counseling and will be responsible for the development and operation of the new Study-and-Work (SAW) program.

He will also develop and operate the college's new career and vocational counseling office and placement bureau.

J. Lawrence Burkholder, president of Goshen College, in making Shenk's appointment, said that Goshen College is eager to help its students and graduates choose careers and professions with shortages of manpower. Because of his years of experience and training in counseling and his wide acquaintance with the church and local community as assistant to the president, director of admissions, and acting director of college relations, Shenk is a "natural" for the newly-created position.



J. B. Shenk, SAW director.

Shenk will return to Goshen in late April to take up his new responsibilities.

He is a graduate of Goshen College and Goshen Biblical Seminary, and a former pastor of Prairie Street Mennonite Church, of Elkhart. He was on the faculty of Goshen College 1952-53 and continuously since 1957. Last year on a sabbatical leave he studied in England.

Mrs. Shenk is the former Betty Frey, of Archbold, Ohio. The Shenks have a son and two daughters.

'SAW' Example 1: You Can Earn $7000 During College Years, Yet Graduate in Four Years

Carl, from Ohio, and Jane, from Illinois, come from families who have modest income and limited savings for their college education. Both students, however, want to earn as much as they can and yet finish college in four years. The four-year SAW pattern is available to both men and women. A typical arrangement for study and work is charted below.

job. At the same time, many young persons are showing a new appreciation for work. SAW will give students a balance between the theory and knowledge gained from books, and practical, physical work and its economic rewards.

Earn and Learn

For a minute, suppose a student chooses SAW and decides to work four trimesters during his college years. It will be possible for him to take an evening course during each of those trimesters. If he does, he can save the room and board costs of a full trimester, because he will have picked up the equivalent of a full trimester's study load in evening courses. It will count toward the nine trimesters required for graduation.

Evening courses are set for the 1972-73 college year, and an expanded offering of evening courses is planned for fall, 1973, to accommodate the large number of students expected in SAW.

Another advantage benefitting students is that the jobs will be year round rather than the much sought after summer jobs, and will pay up to 50 per cent more than what could be earned on an hourly basis in summer-only employment. Students arranging their schedules to accommodate job openings will benefit from increased earnings situation.

High Employment Rate Is in SAW's Favor

A high employment rate and a diversity of job opportunities in the Goshen and Elkhart County area virtually assures the SAW program of success.

Currently the unemployment rate in Goshen is about 2 per cent. About half of these are considered unemployable and on welfare.

Among the leading industries with year round job opportunities for men and women are electronics, rubber, mobile homes, recreational vehicles, and boat manufacturing.

Five-Year SAW: p. 4-5

The Goshen industrial directory lists 88 industries in the city. Twenty-three hire 50 or more employees.

In the outlying towns of Bristol, Middlebury, New Paris, and Wakarusa, 78 more industries are possibilities for student employment.

In the city of Elkhart there are 580 industries, with 124 employing 50 or more workers.

Also in SAW's favor is good cooperation among college, labor, and industry. In addition, the Elkhart county area is attractive to prospective manufacturers and the Goshen Chamber of Commerce receives on the average three inquiries a week from industries wanting information to their questions on plant sites and available work force.

FOOTNOTES

1. The cost and income figures are based on anticipated 1972-73 figures, and are subject to change in future years. Any increase in college fees will likely be scaled according to increases in cost of living. At the same time, wages would also be scaled upward to reflect cost-of-living increases.
2. The expenses do not include personal money required for travel, clothing, laundry, entertainment, dental, optical, and medical charges not covered by insurance, and other incidentals. Amounts needed vary widely from student to student. Goshen College suggests you allow from $300 to $500 a year for these items.
3. Goshen College assumes a rate of $3 an hour for the work trimesters. Some students will earn more and others less. If a student chooses employment where his work will give him additional breadth and depth in his major, such as an internship in banking for a business major, he can expect to earn less than $3 an hour. At the same time, however, he can expect some academic credit for his internship experience.
4. The financial aid package is a suggestion only. Each student who is eligible for aid receives a package tailored to his needs. Packages range from $200 to $2700 and can include a loan to be repaid after graduation, grant, scholarship, and part-time employment while taking a full load of studies.

'SAW' Costs Compared with Selected Colleges

	4 Years	x 4	x 4		x 4
$5315[2]		$11760[2]	$8680[2]		$3880[2]
Net Cost of Five Years:				To this figure, add daily transportation costs to classes, plus room and board costs at home. For example, if the student commutes 20 miles to a local college one way, and it costs him 6¢ a mile, transportation for four years will add $1728 to the total above.
Student can earn it all and have no college debt, and have a small amount left over for incidental expenses.				(transportation estimate)	1728

	Income
	Figure 4 (13-week) summers, working at $2 an hr. for 40-hr. weeks[3]	4160	4160		4160
	Estimated withholding, less refunds	372	372		372
		3788	3788		3788
	Net Cost of Four Years	$ 7972	$4892		$1820
	GC's four-year SAW program with its higher hourly rates during the trimesters of work compares favorably with these colleges.		GC's four-year SAW costs competitive with costs at state universities	If living costs at home approach $17 a week for each of the college years (assuming also the student lives at home during the summers), the costs of GC's four-year SAW program become competitive with college education at a "drive-in" college.

1. The comparable figure at Goshen is $2595.
2. To make comparison between colleges easier, no financial aid was included in net costs. However, financial aid packages are available at all colleges and universities and vary according to the amount of aid funds at the institution.
3. The figure of $2 an hour for summer work was used because summer employment tends to be seasonal and pays less than permanent, year-round employment. This figure may be adjusted to fit a student's local situation.

Two Can Give as Easily as One: Your Company May Match Your Gift

If you contribute to Goshen College and are associated with one of the companies whose names appear in this listing, you can arrange to have a second gift sent, courtesy of your company.

Sound easy? Well, it is.

Perhaps the most pleasant aspect of gift matching, next to the good such contributions do, is how easily you can arrange to have them sent. Once you have made your gift, just inform the appropriate persons at your company that you've done so. A matching check will be sent to GC soon thereafter, indicating that your gift made the matching gift possible.

In effect, by matching your gift, your employer is recognizing the contribution which you, as an educated person, are making to your company. It's the boss' way of saying "thanks" to GC which helped to provide your education.

To be sure, gift matching is only one way in which businesses and corporations are assisting education. But it has become an increasingly significant source of annual support.

Won't you check over this listing to see if your company has such a program. If it does, take a moment to have your gift matched. You may be sure that both gifts will be gratefully received.

'SAW' Example 2: You Can Earn All Your College Expenses in the Five-Year Program

Robert and Susan come from families who want their sons and daughters to foot their own college bills. By extending the Study-And-Work pattern used by Carl and Jane to five years, and working eight trimesters instead of four, Robert and Susan can earn all their college costs and be graduated with no college debt. SUMMARY

Cost of college	$ 14415
Income	14560
Net cost of four years of college	Slight excess ($145) of income over expenses.

No personal resources needed for direct college expenses. No college debt to be paid after graduation.

FOOTNOTES

1. The cost and income figures are based on anticipated 1972-73 figures, and are subject to change in future years. Any increase in college fees will likely be scaled according to increases in cost of living. At the same time, wages would also be scaled upward to reflect cost-of-living increases.
2. The expenses do not include personal money required for travel, clothing, laundry, entertainment, dental, optical, and medical charges not covered by insurance, and other incidentals. Amounts needed vary widely from student to student. Goshen College suggests you allow from $300 to $500 a year for these items.
3. Goshen College assumes a rate of $3 an hour for the work trimesters. Some students will earn more and others less. If a student chooses employment where his work will give him additional breadth and depth in his major, such as an internship in banking for a business major, he can expect to earn less than $3 an hour. At the same time, however, he can expect some academic credit for his internship experience.

Built-in Advantages Listed For Study-and-Work Program

The new Study-And-Work (SAW) program to be launched next September at Goshen College has a number of built-in advantages.

* It exploits the trimester calendar, which divides the year into three neat 14-week terms and allows for vacations at Christmas and during the month of August. Students may work during the holiday recess and August if they are working either the trimester before or after.

* The economic climate of Goshen and Elkhart county is good, with low unemployment, and good management-labor relations.

* A full-time administrator at the college will handle placement of students, details between college and employers, details of living arrangements for students who are working. In addition, he will counsel students on career and vocational matters to assure them the easiest possible transition to a full-time, permanent position upon graduation.

* The offering of evening courses will be expanded to meet the needs of students who want to take courses part-time during the trimesters they are working. By taking advantage of evening courses, a student can pick up the equivalent of a full trimester of residence work in the four-year SAW program, two trimesters in the five-year program.

* A student may drop in or out of the SAW program on an annual basis, according to what best fits with his personal plans.

* Because students will be employed in rotation, arrangements can be made for a team of them to hold down the higher paying, non-seasonal type of jobs. These are in contrast to the lower paying summer seasonal employment many college students must be content with.

SST Program Evaluated In Scholarly Journal

A report on two overseas study programs by Dr. Allan O. Pfnister, professor of higher education at the University of Denver, appears in the fall, 1971, issue of North Central Association Quarterly. "The Evaluation of Overseas Study Programs: Two Case Studies" is a seven-page abstract of a longer article that compares Goshen College's Study-Service Trimester with the program in Spain by the Regional Conference Board of American Programs. Pfnister, a member of the independent panel evaluating the SST program in 1969-70, is chairman of the North Central Association committee on liberal arts education, a consultant-examiner for North Central Association commission on institutions of higher education, and a former provost of Wittenberg University.

Alumni Clubs Meet in Pennsylvania, Indiana, Illinois, Florida

Four alumni clubs met in late fall and early winter in Pennsylvania, Indiana, Illinois, and Florida.

Forty-four alumni and guests from the Western Pennsylvania area met at Bittner's Restaurant, of Somerset, for a roast sirloin dinner November 13. J. Lawrence Burkholder '39, GC president, spoke on the future of Goshen College. New officers are: David W. Cressman '61, president; LaMarr Kopp, vice-president; Betty (Hostetler) '52 Kolb, secretary; and Arden Yoder '52, treasurer. A trio, composed of Betty Kolb and daughters, provided music. On the planning committee were James Burkholder '60, Mrs. Kolb, and Kopp and Yoder.

At the Davis Ranch House Restaurant, of Fort Wayne, Ind., 44 alumni and guests heard J. Lawrence Burkholder speak on the future of GoshenCollege November 20. On the planning committee were Dr. Joseph Hoover '55, Allen Graber '64, Dr. Kenneth Miller '54, and Marvin Frey '61. The committee will also plan next year's meeting.

A near-capacity crowd of alumni, friends, and community persons attended the Goshen Players' performance of "Brothers in Christ," at Evanston Mennonite Church, Chicago, on November 20. The drama was written by Caesar von Arx about the 16th century Anabaptists.

James A. Burkholder, '60, pastor of the church, reported, "One of the community persons who had studied at Northwestern said that the presentation compared favorably with the drama at the university. A lay Catholic person said that the issues in the play are the very same which Catholics now face in relating to the institutional Catholic Church. It was a revealing historical inversion to hear a Catholic identify with an Anabaptist. In retrospect, I see several values in this presentation: (1) we benefited from the play itself, but apart from this we profited much from relating to the cast as persons; (2) it afforded us a significant point of contact with the community that communicated something authentic about ourselves; (3) it was a real morale booster to our church."

Planning the event were Dr. Paul '57 and Barbara (Amstutz '58) Hodel, and Edwin '53 and Edith (Shank '60) Herner.

On January 3 47 alumni and guests of the Sarasota, Fla., area met at the Garden Gate Restaurant for ham and chicken. Dr. Burkholder spoke in a program planned by Louis '62 and Carmen (Ebersole '55) Lehman, and Dr. Frederick '44 and Dorthy (Bell '50) Swartzendruber.

Three regional meetings are set for late winter and early spring: Feb. 19 in Holmes county, Ohio; March 22 in Kalona, Iowa; April (date not set) in Eastern Pennsylvania. Dr. Henry D. Weaver Jr., provost-elect, will speak at the Iowa meeting. Speakers for the other meetings have not yet been announced.

Honors Showered on Maple Leaf Soccer, Highest Scoring Club in College History

Competing in the NAIA national soccer playoffs at Dunn, N.C., Dec 1-4, was the grand prize for an outstanding season for the Maple Leafs.

When it was all said and done, the Maple Leafs posted an excellent 13-3 record with two of the setbacks coming at the Dunn eight-team tourney.

Students, faculty, alumni, and townspeople pitched in to make the nationals something to remember. They raised $215.25 to provide live coverage of GC's games over WGCS in a special arrangement with the phone company. Two alumni, brothers Allen '64, Auburn, Ind., and Dwight '57 Graber, Fort Wayne, Ind., helped meet trip expenses since college operating funds had not been budgeted for post-season participation.

The Leafs won conference and state crowns. They then went to Berea, Ky., and captured the five-state area contest despite a car accident enroute, which kept five men out of the game.

Coach John Ingold notes the high lights of the season: most goals scored by a GC soccer team, 69 in 16 games. . .most shutouts in one season, eight. . . a second Mid-Central Conference title that ups the record to 12-0 in the two years of membership. . . GC wasn't shut out this year . . .11 players were cited for all-conference recognition while back Yosiah Bwatwa, a do-everything ace from Africa, was named to the All-State and Indiana-Ohio All-Star teams that included major universities. . .record for the past seven years is a sharp 66-12-4. . .overall in the 14 years of GC soccer the record is 74-42-6.

John's Jottings

By JOHN L. FRANKENFIELD '68, executive secretary of the Alumni Association and director of alumni relations

An alumnus recently made the flippant remark, "It isn't how much you give that counts, it's the spirit."

Not quite.

Too many alumni make a token contribution to the Alumni Annual Fund, and sit back and figure they've done all they should.

They haven't. A token contribution isn't enough. Goshen College doesn't have token students. Nor token professors. Nor token buildings. Nor token books. Nor token anything else. Tokens are for subways and buses.

If you really care, if you really want to help create a climate of joy and freedom and love at Goshen, you'll give more than a token. You'll give a bit of yourself — the most you can afford.

You'll realize why the spirit of giving just isn't enough any more. And you'll know, and care about, what Goshen is — persons like you.

Thank you.

Alumni Are Among Church, GC Representatives Planning 'Festival of the Holy Spirit'

Alumni are having an important, though indirect, influence on the planning of the Festival of the Holy Spirit, set for the weekend of Pentecost Sunday, May 19-21, on the Goshen College campus.

On the 20-member reference and counsel committee are seven GC alumni plus four students. On the smaller program and steering committee the members are five alumni and two students.

J. Lawrence Burkholder, president of Goshen College and chairman of the program, explained the Festival: "The Holy Spirit works in an impressive variety of ways among Christians today. We must become aware of the Spirit's roles and identify them."

The weekend, also described as "Pentecost in Faith and Experience," will have a balance of Bible study, sharing sessions, mass meetings, and reports, testimonies, and singing.

Small sharing circles will give all persons opportunity to tell how the Spirit has spoken to them and worked in their lives. As an added high light, the program committee wants to place a guitarist in each group.

Special activities are tentatively set for youth and Sunday morning worship.

Burkholder said, "The celebration has great potential for lighting fires in persons. The entire weekend will be flexible to let the Spirit move any person to do something. The mood will be one of openness and spontaneity."

Not limited to any age, the festival is open to everyone — high school young persons through grandparents, lay persons, pastors, and theologians, believers from all parts of the United States and Canada, individuals and families.

Among those on the reference and counsel committee for the Holy Spirit Festival are (seated, left to right) Jo Bontrager, Indiana-Michigan MYF; Bonnie Mierau '73, GC student; J. Lawrence Burkholder '39, GC president; Mrs. Charles Hensler and Mrs. Lowell Mumaw '50, Indiana-Michigan conference; Robert Guth '72, GC student; (standing) John Crist '73, GC student; Harold Bauman '46, GC campus pastor; Howard H. Charles '41, Associated Mennonite Biblical Seminaries; David Eshleman, Illinois conference; and Carl Kreider '36, GC provost.

Haiti President Jean-Claude Duvalier Grants Audience to SST Students

Goshen College's 14 Study-Service Trimester students in Haiti met Haiti's President Jean-Claude Duvalier at his Port-au-Prince palace during a 1 1/2-hour visit last fall.

A privilege, especially for citizens from another country, the event included each student shaking Duvalier's hand and receiving a large autographed picture of him. Each student also received two mammoth volumes and a slimmer one of his father's printed works.

In his speech before Pres. Duvalier, J.B. Shenk, faculty leader of the student unit, said, "Your Excellency, it is our great and unusual honor to be granted this audience. As young people, we congratulate and salute you with special interest as the youngest president among the countries of the world. . .

"We wish you every success as you carry out the great responsibilities and opportunities left to you by your late, lamented father. . .

"We thank you on behalf of your countrymen for the many courtesies and kindnesses we have received. Each student lives in a home of a Haitian family where they enjoy the privileges of a son or a daughter. The people of Haiti have taken us to their hearts and we have learned to love them. . .

"Our purpose in coming to Haiti was to develop a better understanding of and appreciation for the people and culture of Haiti, and we have not been disappointed. Please accept our gratitude."

Alta Hertzler

Join the Hertzlers for Grand Tour Of Scandinavia, July 17 - Aug. 7

You've heard some of the things they say about Scandinavia. Why don't you go and see for yourself? Can the fjords be as magnificent as they appear on calendar pictures? Are the Danish open-face sandwiches as varied and delectable as they look? Do the people in suburban Stockholm who live in planned communities view them as concrete utopias?

There will be visits to craft shops in Copenhagen and Frederickstad; Scandinavians are widely known for the quality of their contemporary crafts — fabric decoration, weaving, silversmithing and furniture building. Also visits at Hamlet's Castle at Elsinore, the Viking ships at Bygdoy, urban planning centers in Stockholm and the breath-taking fjordlands of Voss and Hardanger.

On the way back there will be a stop in England, a tour of London, and a trip to the countryside to Stratford, Warwick Castle and Banbury Cross.

Leaders of the tour will be James '61 and Alta '62 Hertzler, of the GC faculty. Alta has studied Scandinavian handcrafts and been influenced by Scandinavian design in her own craft work. Jim's study of European history will bring a perspective of the past that will make the tour come alive.

The 22-day tour will begin on Monday, July 17, when it leaves New York by air and arrives at Copenhagen the next day. The flight from Bergen to London is set for August 3 with return to New York on August 7. Cost of the trip is $1270, and includes air travel, road travel and transfers, city tours, tourist class hotels, and all meals, tips, service charges and airport taxes. The price is based on a minimum of 15 tour members.

Ninety Class Agents Working in '72 Fund

Ninety class agents have accepted responsibilities in the 1972 Alumni Fund.

A class agent writes to his fellow alumni from his class and encourages their support and gifts. In the larger classes more than one agent is chosen so that each writes not more than 100 persons. The agents are from a variety of professions and include teachers, nurses, farmers, doctors, homemakers, and businessmen.

"Class agents give valuable service by helping their fellow alumni keep informed about the goals and needs of Goshen College," said John Frankenfield, director of alumni relations and executive secretary of the Alumni Association.

This is the fourth year for a class agent organization. Frankenfield commended the agents, "Their alumni spirit is one of unity and responsibility to the future of Christian higher education, in contrast to a mere 'loyalty to the alma mater' feeling."

Maple Leafs Get Experience, 6-4 Record

As the Newsletter went to press, the Maple Leafs held a 6-4 record, even though last April's graduation took five key players with height and experience.

But there's sizzle and sparkle in the team and it outplayed tough Mid-Central Conference rivals and ended the pre-holiday season with a 3-0 conference record that included Huntington, 82-61; Concordia, 81-59; and St. Francis, 77-61. The Leafs have also handcuffed Manchester, 77-60; Spring Arbor, 81-62; and Tabor College, 75-72, in the Mennonite Classic.

The big guns this season are Don Jantzi, 185-pound 6'-6" center, Archbold, Ohio, the only senior on the team, with an 18.6 points-a-game average; and Glenn Ray Miller, 155-pound 5'9" guard, sophomore, from Kidron, Ohio, with 15 points a game.

Fred Litwiller, coach, has compiled a handsome 44-19 record in his first three years at his post.

Bulletin
Vol. LXVI. No. 1.
January, 1972

At Goshen:

A climate of joy and warmth and love,

Freshmen are weekly companions to elderly persons. The course is an in-depth study on the aging.

Wednesday evening prayer and praise fellowships let any student share freely what God is doing in his life.

A weekend of openness, singing, and biblical insights is planned for May 19-21: the Festival of the Holy Spirit.

SST-ers give Christian affection to morally abandoned, young Costa Rican girls wise in the ways of streetwalkers before they are 10 years old.

Other SST-ers grieve that many Haitian children will never have enough to eat.

We hope it occurs to you to link Goshen with tenderness, feeling and eternal truth. Because your understanding and enthusiasm for GC's programs are all-important. You can influence young persons to choose Goshen College. And your gift to the 1972 Alumni Fund, or a bequest or annuity, will help meet vital program needs.

Your help and support has a profound effect on our climate of joy and warmth and love.

Will you think about it?

Sharon Borom (No. 15) goes up for the spike against Grace College in junior varsity volleyball. The JV's didn't lose any of their games this year.

Willie Woods (second from left) gains on his opponent in high hurdles. Woods is GC's record holder in this track event.

Elaine Yoder successfully guides another tip, this time against Huntington, which GC went on to defeat. Chris Miller is No. 32.

"We're trying to take the grimness out of sports"

A little more like kittens

By J. LAWRENCE BURKHOLDER,
president of Goshen College

Recently I tried to explain to the president of an Indiana college Goshen's philosophy of athletics. It became apparent that he could not grasp our program nor our point of view. It seemed incongruous to him. He could not understand how:

*Goshen competes and yet offers no athletic scholarships.

*The athletic budget is low and yet no admission is charged.

*The emphasis is on intramural athletics and yet Goshen participates in a conference.

*The athletic profile is low and yet the spirit is high.

*Goshen plays hard and yet primarily for the fun of it.

*Goshen plays to win and yet victories and losses are soon forgotten.

In recent months the volume Lombardi: Winning Is the Only Thing has inspired considerable reflection about the connections between attitudes and value systems. The way the game is played is supposedly a clue to the culture. At Goshen the athletic program reflects the school as a whole, its values, traditions and faith. This is the way it should be. It is the connection between athletics and the underlying principles of the college that give Goshen's program its unique and somewhat enigmatic character. Goshen has developed a program which expresses its commitment to a Christian life style — brotherhood, community, discipleship, and simplicity.

I would like to point out several characteristics of athletics at Goshen. First, everyone participates. The key to its program is emphasis on intramural sports. Athletics are not reserved for the talented. The gym is for everyone.

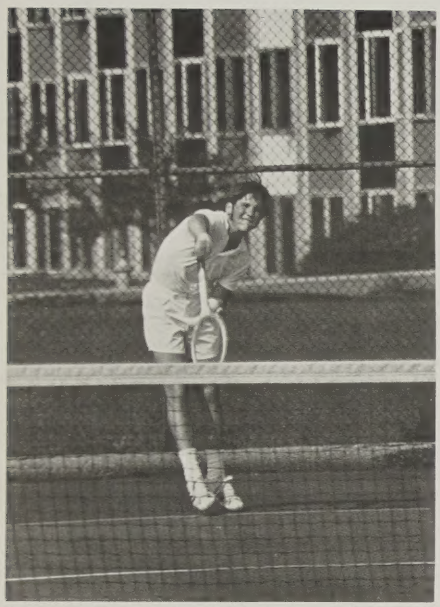
Second, athletics are viewed primarily as a form of recreation. Athletics are to be enjoyed. Students, like kittens, are encouraged to play simply for the fun of it. Goshen is trying to take the grimness out of sports. It is a way to relax, to exercise unused muscles and to burn up excessive libido.

Third, athletics are permitted to find their own intrinsic levels of interest and excitement. Athletic events are not prostituted for the sake of institutional prestige, money or favor with the alumni or community. The commercialization of sports at many institutions of higher education is scandalous. Buying players, hiring and firing coaches, exploiting students, are symptomatic of a sickness in middle-class America. At Goshen our attitude may be summed up — "let athletics be athletics, no more and no less."

Fourth, athletics are given academic dignity. Goshen has avoided a dichotomy between cognitive and physical disciplines. Physical education is respected. Just because it takes the body seriously, it is not denigrated. Hence, Goshen has endeavored to staff its physical education department with highly qualified teachers. At present four of them have their doctorates.

In the near future, there will emerge Nadar-like prophets calling for reform. They will expose patterns in athletics which reflect passing styles of life and outmoded values. Athletics will be purged of its unnatural seriousness, excessive competitiveness, commercialization, crudeness and profanity. I take satisfaction in the fact that Goshen is moving in a direction which is compatible with a Christian life style and an emerging consciousness in American life.

The best of the sport for the best of the player



The opponent faces another of Dave Swartzendruber's potential aces, "cannonball services" they're sometimes called. Men play tennis in the fall; women, in the spring.

Bob Shetler never touched a tennis racket until he went to college. Now, after four years at Goshen, he claims he won't put it down for the rest of his life. "It's a great way to stay in shape."

College physical education is a contrast to high school, Shetler points out. "In high school, teachers tend to push basketball to get fellows out for the school team. But that's a detriment to learning new sports like soccer, archery, volleyball, gymnastics, golf, tennis. It's commendable of Goshen that instructors funnel students to many sports for a lifetime of enjoyment. They exploit the sport to help a fellow enjoy it, rather than exploit his athletic ability for the sport's sake."

For Shetler, the sport was tennis, and he helped GC carry off the Mid-Central Conference crown this year. It was the second year in a row that GC won it, and GC has been in the conference only two years.

Shetler, from Bloomdale, Ohio, will complete requirements for the bachelor of science in education degree by August 1. His major is physical education, and he probably faces the most crowded job market of any in teaching.

But he takes it all in stride. "There's always the hope of getting a job."

He adds, "I'm more comfortable in the gym than in a classroom. Working with unskilled persons is a challenge. The person with skill can develop further on his own. But teaching a boy, for example, who has a natural fear of the trampoline how to bounce and stop — and watching him progress to do stunts only some college gymnasts are doing — that gives me a good feeling."

Shetler's emphasis on teaching the unskilled and those afraid to try something new is part of the backbone philosophy of GC's physical education program — both for those who want to teach and make physical education a career as well as for those who enroll only in the required physical education courses, usually their freshman and sophomore years.

Gingerich Oversees Department

Overseeing the department is Roman Gingerich, who enrolled at GC in 1937. By 1940 he was teaching men's physical education and he's been on the faculty ever since. He's witnessed a complete turn-about-face in attitudes — from recreation and athletics as "a necessary evil" to a "full-fledged member of the team of disciplines with a potential for significant contribution to the goals of education."

Assisting Gingerich is a full-time staff of five — Ruth Gunden, John D. Ingold, Fred Litwiller, Berdene Wyse, J. Harold Yoder. All have master's degrees; four have doctor's. Together they comprise the largest of any Mennonite college physical education department and prepare a respectable number of majors every year — in 1971 21 seniors were graduated with physical education majors, this year the number is 12.

As at any college, the staff works closely with all types of students — from "those who come to class because it's required" to the physical education majors and "those with skill who enjoy the challenge of competition."

Like Shetler, Jan Schrock, a senior from Wakarusa, Indiana, is a physical education major. She traces her decisions: "Ever since I can remember, I've been interested in athletics and people. When I was a high school freshman, my physical education teacher helped me see my abilities, and I was inspired then to do for others what she had done for me." Her teacher was Berdene Wyse, a GC graduate who since joined the GC faculty.

Yosiah Bwatwa, right halfback, takes a throw-in against the Spring Arbor Cougars in the Area IV play-offs. Bwatwa won first team recognitions, All-State and All-Star.

Jan discounts that physical education is a "snap." She reports, "People think you play all the time. That's not the case. Courses like kinesiology and exercise physiology are tough."

Nevertheless, versatility pays off. Jan, who played field hockey, basketball, volleyball, and tennis on GC's varsity, says it has been excellent preparation for coaching she expects to do later. She muses further, "Playing in intercollegiate athletics tested my Christianity. I had to take the bad with the good, especially if a contest was officiated poorly. Many times our teams felt God's presence with us."

But also valuable have been her experiences in intramural sports. She reflects, "It has been really good for me to play with girls not as experienced as I. I will be better able to teach for having been exposed to the spectrum of abilities, and will be more tolerant of others who don't have sheer desire, athletic aggressiveness, or the knowledge of how to use their body's potential."

Nurse on Varsity Team

Despite the intense academic burden that a nursing student shoulders, Janice Roth found time to join Jan Schrock and a few other girls, some of whom were physical education majors, for varsity field hockey and basketball. Janice, a senior from Washington, Iowa, will be a nurse in an Appalachian hospital in Harlan, Kentucky, next year.

Warm in her praise of Coaches Wyse (field hockey) and Gunden (basketball), Janice said, "You can't find two finer coaches. They had some distinctive quality to unify us and motivate us to work hard and make it fun."

Women's sports currently lack the organization of men's sports. As a result, GC's women play small colleges and big schools alike. In basketball, GC women this year ranked fourth in Indiana and went to regional play-offs in post-season play. There they beat Ohio State University by five points, only to be defeated by Indiana University, which was later defeated by the team that won the nationals. "It made us look good," Janice said.

"The one improvement I'd like to see," Janice says, "is more campus publicity. Not until the end of my freshman year at GC did I find out about women's sports, and I was disappointed. But then, GC just doesn't make a 'big deal' out of its athletics."

Janice's comment merely points up GC's philosophy. First priority for personnel, scheduling, facilities, and equipment is given to the basic physical education instruction every student receives sometime during college. Second priority goes to intramurals — student teams who organize informally and play each other. Third priority is intercollegiate sports.

Variety of Basic Instruction

Vastly different from the turn of the century when basic instruction in physical education was lumped with public speaking, reading, oratory, and well-timed gestures, Goshen today offers students a variety of freshman and sophomore-level courses. Some like archery, golf, swimming, tennis, campcrafts, and creative rhythms are co-ed. If an instructor sees a student with proficiency, he gently nudges him to learn new skills. Adapted physical education serves the handicapped student or the one with a temporary injury.

Instructors add and drop courses as student interest change. Bowling is no longer offered because too many students had their own bowling balls, a sign they had some mastery of the sport. Three sessions of judo were added to the women's foundations course — to teach a girl how to disable an attacker temporarily so she can flee. Yoga may be added next year. A wrestling mat in memory of a local Concord high school wrestler was given to GC this year and augments that sport. Before the mat arrived, 30 men had been conditioning and practicing on gymnastics mats. Now they anticipate competition with other colleges on a club basis in a few years.

In an innovative, cooperative program with Mennonite Board of Missions, Elkhart, Ind., Goshen College has approved internships in physical education for Thelma Clemmer and Leanne Thomas at Woodstock School, at Mussoorie, high in the Himalayas in India. The two sophomores will teach, get valuable field experience, and do independent study for college credit for eight months beginning in May this year, in a set-up similar to voluntary service.

Instructors also note a shift in long range trends in student interests. Since 1950 competitive team sports have lost ground. Lifetime sports like golf, swimming, badminton, and especially tennis — perhaps because eight courts are only a step from the three largest residence halls — have gained.

A recent survey shows that juniors and seniors believe strongly in physical fitness — a primary aim of the basic instruction program. Vernon Rice, a physical education major from Kempton, Pa., found that students (1) regarded physical education as fun, (2) believed calisthenics taken regularly are good for one's general health, (3) looked on skill in active games or sports as important to leading a full life, and (4) thought physical education should receive more emphasis. It was clear victory for the department.

Small School May Offer More

Intramurals and interscholastic sports have equal status at GC. Together, they afford every student the full spectrum of athletic activities, whether the desire is for recreation only with fellow classmates, or for competition with highly skilled performers from other colleges.

For example, Goshen attracted 6-1, 175-pound Larry Beckler, a "pretty fair" country athlete from Seward, Nebraska. A football standout at Seward High, he turned down a full-ride scholarship to Nebraska U. as he wrapped up his prep career. The track whiz and soccer star felt he "couldn't quite get what he wanted out of education at the big school." He went to Hesston College two years, then came to Goshen. Beckler, who happens to be a history major, helped GC's soccer team reach the national playoffs this year and compile a seven-year record of 66 wins, 12 losses, and 4 ties.

Don Jantzi, valuable 6-6 pivotman and NAIA District 21 rebounding champion, thinks basketball year-round except when he manages GC's track squad in the spring. What does he like about Goshen? For one thing, "There's just the right amount of pressure. It's not big-time ball, but GC's in a league now (Mid-Central Conference) and that provides the right amount of tense situations." Jantzi contends athletic scholarships make for dissension in a team as well as an unhealthy overemphasis on winning.

According to Jantzi, Goshen could be stronger if it talked more about its athletics. "They ought to emphasize it's a place of academic excellence that has good coaches and develops good ball teams and good ball players." Also, Jantzi would like Goshen to have "a rebounding machine, a Universal gym (for weightlifting), and equipment for isometrics (to increase muscle tone)." Jantzi regrets the tight scheduling of the Union gym; it is the only building on campus to be used to full capacity, and is booked solid from 6 a.m. to midnight Monday through Saturday, and often for six hours on Sunday afternoons. Jantzi recalls "varsity practice always took back seat to intramurals, and sometimes this meant sessions from 9 to 11 at night." In spite of midnight scrimmages, the Maple Leafs compiled a 12-9 record this season.

Students plan their final project for creative rhythms, offered yearly in the basic instructional program. Understanding of basic movement is emphasized.

Like the precision of a perpetual motion machine, sports seasons follow each other year after year. Goshen offers college men tennis, cross-country, soccer, basketball, baseball, golf, and track in interscholastic play. To the women Goshen offers field hockey, volleyball, basketball, and tennis. But the majority of participants are found in intramurals, where there is a full range of opportunities for every skill level. Jantzi, who confined himself to intramurals his freshman and sophomore years recalls, "The intramural set-up is excellent. It's organized well. The playing fields and gym were always scheduled ahead and available for us. You play for the fun of it, and I had a lot of fun."

Campus prepares for Fest of Holy Spirit

The beginning of the Christian church will be celebrated at the Festival of the Holy Spirit on the weekend of Pentecost Sunday, May 19-21, on the Goshen College campus.

More than 2,000 persons of all ages are expected to attend to hear speakers like J. Lawrence Burkholder, Larry Christenson, Donald M. Williams, and Nelson Litwiller, and take personal part in "Search and Share" groups.

Burkholder, who is confident that Festival-goers will feel the presence of the Spirit and be free to express their ideas and feelings — whether through art, music, prayer, testimony, or other ways — will deliver the opening address, "The Age of the Spirit", on Friday evening.

Christenson, Lutheran pastor and author of "Speaking in Tongues" (translated in eight languages), will be Bible studies leader.

Williams, minister to college students at Hollywood Presbyterian Church — the largest Presbyterian church in the United States — will speak on "The Jesus People and the Church."

Litwiller, international missionary who met the Holy Spirit in a fuller and deeper experience about two years ago, will deliver the final address.

Search and Share groups will cover a variety of areas, like "Spirit and Hymnody," "Baptism and Fullness of the Spirit," "Gifts of the Spirit with Focus on Tongues," "Gifts of the Spirit with Focus on Healing," "Spirit and Marriage," "Spirit and Money," "Spirit and Creativity," and "Spirit and Christian Freedom."

Help is on the way for students' college costs

To ease a student's cost of college at Goshen, the "Study-And-Work" (SAW) program will be launched in September, 1972.

In SAW, the college finds good paying, full-time jobs so that the student can earn more toward college costs than what usual summer work offers.

Also, the college helps set up a rotation arrangement so that a student works one trimester a year and studies two: in fall Tom works while Dick and Harry study; in winter Dick works at the job while Tom and Harry study; and in spring Harry works while Tom and Dick study.

Alumni giving slightly ahead after nine months

As the Bulletin goes to press, gifts from alumni to the 1972 Annual Fund are slightly ahead of 1971 in comparing nine months of solicitation.

A 3 per cent increase in gifts for the 1972 Fund has brought the total to $125,000. Number of alumni responding to the Fund has also increased; to date 2200 donors have given, a 1 per cent increase.

John L. Frankenfield, director of alumni relations, attributes part of the increases to successful marathon telephone campaigns in Goshen and Elkhart areas. Other "phonothons" are set for Fort Wayne, Indianapolis, and South Bend; Archbold, Wooster-Orrville, Millersburg, and West Liberty, Ohio (in late April); Kalona, Iowa, and Peoria, Ill. (early May); and Lancaster, Souderton, and Johnstown, Pa. (mid-May).

The 1972 Alumni Fund will close on June 30, the end of the college's fiscal year. Last year alumni raised $158,000 for operations through class agents, who are also working this year, and through phonothon campaigns.

Four named to board

Four new Overseers were named to the Board for three-year terms, beginning in late 1971. They are:

The love of God and the communion of the Holy Spirit

Baccalaureate sermon by
J. Lawrence Burkholder, April 16, 1972

J. Lawrence Burkholder, president, and Mrs. Burkholder greet graduating seniors and their parents.

It is late to ask, "What is a college education for?" Yet I recall that when I was a teacher, students thought it helpful at the end of the course for me to tell them what the course was about! It helped them sift out what was important, and put things together.

To the question, "What has college been about?" I would say it is to know about the love of God and to experience the love of God. Of course, there are professional purposes as well. But Goshen College was founded especially to perpetuate a point of view and to comend an experience. The point of view is that underneath appearances there is a supreme being, God, who loves humanity and the experience is to know God by immediate contact.

In recent years the experience of love has been confirmed by psychologists and psychiatrists, including Fromm and Erickson. They recognize that life is unbearable apart from love. If any truth comes through in today's advanced stage of technology and affluence, it is: despite all our achievements and accomplishments, it really isn't worth it unless life is lived in love.

Love is ultimate reality

But alas, the truth of God's love is not self-evident. Many do not believe God is love. That must be accepted by faith. Yet there are actual experiences of love which would provide some basis for faith. Love is so necessary and so transforming that it commends itself as ultimate reality. The most important thing which can happen to anybody, therefore, is to be loved. And being loved, he can then love others.

How can this truth be communicated from one generation to another? One way is through teaching. In Christian history, teaching has been important in communicating the experience of God's love from one generation to another. The importance of the child is emphasized in the history of Israel. The obligation of every Jewish father was to communicate the law to his son. In the New Testament the importance of teaching was strengthened: when Jesus left this earth, He commanded His followers to make disciples of all nations, and teach them all that He had communicated to them.

Love must be experienced

We must concede, however, that this truth cannot be communicated only by teaching. It has to be experienced by the person himself. Love is more than something to hear about from pulpits or parents or professors. In order to believe that love is ultimate reality, you have to experience it. Educators are learning that education, if it is to be adequate, is not limited to formal courses, classes and professors. What is learned must be felt. At Goshen College we are trying to open ourselves to the presence and activity of God, to invite God to live and work among us.

We do not know the intricacies of the channels of love. But our purpose at Goshen is to form a kind of magnetic field where Christ and His Spirit may come into our lives and make changes that will go with us the rest of our days.

There are signs that God is an effective power on our campus. Many students have definitely been touched this year. Not only have they heard about what has happened to people of other generations, or to their parents or the professors, they have actually experienced the love of God in their relationships with each other. They have found God in this chapel, or at the Wednesday evening prayer and praise meeting. Students returning from SST have felt, some for the first time, that they had become the channels of God's love as they helped others to live a more satisfying life. Recall the picture in this year's Maple Leaf of a student holding a Korean orphan. The serene expression on the child's face would suggest that the love of God is being mediated to her.

Loving fellowship combats despair

Every generation faces temptation. The great temptation of today's generation is cynicism, and with it sadness. Young people are not exactly turned on by the world. They are not impressed by many of the achievements of civilization.

I ask, how can we continue to believe that the world is undergirded by a loving being. The answer lies in the communion of the Holy Spirit. The solution to cynicism, apathy, and despair is God's action among His people, called the koinonia.

It is becoming abundantly clear that the world cannot be taken on singly. If a person lives in isolation and loneliness, he will end in despair. In order to know and to experience a God of love people must gather together in love, reinforcing one another, enabling each other to go out and love the world.

I hope therefore that in addition to whatever technical knowledge you may have gotten in your field, you may have experienced what the Apostle Paul called "the fellowship of the saints or the communion of the spirit." I hope that many of the seniors may have experienced the love of God and will perpetuate it. I hope the conviction that God is love will be sustained in your experience as you go into the world and that you will find the church to be a fellowship which fosters and sustains that conviction.

This is no call to martyrdom, heroicism, or suffering

It's urgent that you take responsibility for society

Commencement address by
George W. Webber, April 16, 1972

When I went to New York to seminary, two things happened. First, I discovered that 12 minutes from Union Seminary were the slums of East Harlem, an old immigrant neighborhood a square mile in size where the poor — the black, the Puerto Rican, and the white — lived, and where the name of Jesus was nothing but a swear word on the lips of little children. In the heart of great New York City was this vast neighborhood without the church, because Harlem people didn't fit in any of the churches.

Second, I discovered the Bible. And I linked Harlem and the Bible together, and found the task is to put biblical faith and the needs and urgencies of the times together.

Born and raised in Des Moines, Iowa, I believed with deep conviction the great myths that dominate American life. I was profoundly committed to democracy, equality of political opporturnity, and opportunity for everybody to a decent living and good life.

East Harlem shatters myths

But when I suddenly got dumped into East Harlem, the myths got shattered. Democracy doesn't work if you're black or profoundly poor or profoundly discouraged or profoundly locked-in.

Clergymen are good at defining other people's sins, and it took me a while to realize Isaiah's message, "Woe is me! For I am lost; for I am a man of unclean lips," meant me. Just the fact that I had come to East Harlem to help the poor people should have tipped me off. We who were working there actually called ourselves, "God's colony in man's world." Can you imagine Americans using an imperialistic, colonialist title to describe the function of church in society? It was great rhetoric 20 years.

And it is a good thing today that nobody bought our ministry or listened to us or seemed interested, even though we were shocked that they didn't respond. Because we were trying to reproduce, in another world, a middle-class church from Des Moines, Iowa, and make them middle-class Iowa Christians, instead of helping plant the church in a cultural situation to find its own integrity and power.

Anthropologist points way

In our predicament we hired a brilliant young research anthropologist for six months to study the people on 100th Street and teach us how to communicate with them so we could help them become Christians.

At the end of three months, she met the group ministry and said, "I've got the answer. I stopped studying East Harlem last week and took a look at you guys. It isn't that the people in East Harlem can't understand you, it's the fact that you're phony through and through. You've come as the good guys to help the bad, the saved to help the sinner, the blessed by faith to help the unblessed. You're the most paternalistic people in the world and that's the only way Christians can act. You stand on the bank of East Harlem analyzing, dissecting, giving speeches to suburban women's groups about how the poor people live."

She continued, "You should look at your faces. Because you're Christian, you're determined to love them even if it kills you. You throw life rings to drowning men and haul them into the safety of the church where you stand secure and uninvolved. Until you jump into the turmoil of East Harlem and its history — until you become one drowning man with other drowning men, the only difference being that perhaps by the grace of God you point to the Christ who saved you both — you may as well forget about trying to be ministers in East Harlem."

What she meant was, "Stop being so confoundedly Christian, and be human." Now that was tough. What does it mean to follow, as a Christian, the path of our Lord Jesus Christ and enter into the life of the world in human flesh? What does it mean truly for me to live? What does it mean to be a human being who fully expresses what is life's potential? It's the overwhelming issue of our day.

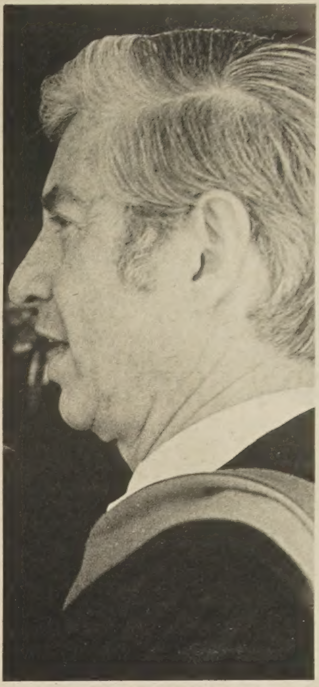
Jones and Chavez

Let me say I think the answer is two things. You've got to get them both together or you're in real trouble. Let me put it first by a story.

I've known Eddie Jones since he was a boy of 14 years old; he's now 27. He told me a few weeks ago he hasn't seen his mother for some years but that really doesn't matter. New York state has been his father and mother for most of the last 13 years, since he's been in and out of nine state institutions, mostly prisons. He's gone in and out, from one narcotics charge to another, back on the street and back into jail, always feeling sorry for himself yet always with good resolve to change his life, and always falling back into the pattern. Last spring I saw him at Auburn State Prison. We had a good talk and Eddie Jones was different. Man, he was together. He'd been reading books from the third world. He'd read about Che Guevara, the Black Panthers, Soul on Ice. He had discovered he could be proud of being black, be able to stop feeling sorry for himself and the forces that had been warping and twisting his life so that he no longer felt he was a victim, and be a contributor to society. He was really a man. He suddenly realized he had a history and he had a future. In theological language we'd say he had discovered his capacity for transcendence. He understood himself in relationship to some purpose that stood above him, and he looked at himself in the light of ultimate questions in a fresh way.

But that's only half of the answer — to know oneself.

The other half is what we see in the man Christ Jesus. Again, let me put it by a story.



George W. Webber, New York Theological Seminary president, is in a team ministry in East Harlem store-front and regular churches.

Several weeks ago a clerygman who's worked for ten years with, may I use the name, Cesar Chavez, was talking about the impact of this unbelievably selfless man. Chavez years ago sat down and took a look at himself and his commitments. He got it all together and then he gave it away. He's the most truly human person I've ever met, he said.

Now that's the second part of the answer. You can't say yes to faith without taking the consequences. You can't have ultimate meaning in your life, you can't have a ball, unless you are investing your energy significantly in responsibilities for the world. You want to shape history and society you're a part of, regardless of the mess it's in. Anybody that isn't part of taking care of God's world with whatever gifts he has is going to be less than human.

America is littered

I suppose I ought to end here, but I have a footnote. Currently the scene in America is littered with disillusioned men and women who committed themselves to drastic and radical social change and heard the call of poverty or racism or ecology or war. In the face of the fact that they didn't get rid of wars or poverty or racism, they have retreated to the temple to recover their vision of the Lord high and lifted up or to the rigorous enclaves of sectarianism. But Isaiah means, "You've got to go in spite of the frustration you face out there." You can't cop out when the going gets tough.

I remember well when I decided to leave Union Seminary, a beloved older friend took me aside and said, "Bill, you're a fool to go to a community like East Harlem and burn your life out. I've seem a whole generation of my friends commit themselves to social causes and at the end of their lives the problems of poverty or housing or racism or narcotics were worse than when they began and they end up cynical and bitter and angry at God. And it's going to happen to you too."

But in the Bible, they crucified our Lord and He didn't quit and He didn't take a short cut. He made His witness in the face of hostility.

Expose misery and horrors

I am convinced both the vision of the temple and the commitment to expose the misery and horrors of our society are needed. Our calling impells us to do it. It is most urgent for the Christian in American society today to have the guts to tell it like it is to the tremendous principalities and powers in government and economics and the military and all the rest that are determining the direction of American life. You can't do that unless you're part of the scene. Whatever else Christian action involves, it's to speak the clear word of truth and justice in the midst of society, to witness to what it means to be authentically human, to take the consequences and responsibilities we share for the structures of society.

This is no call to martyrdom or heroicism or suffering. In spite of the conflict it will bring, this is a call to take your life, get it all together, and give it away. That's what it means really to live.

One way to say it's all over

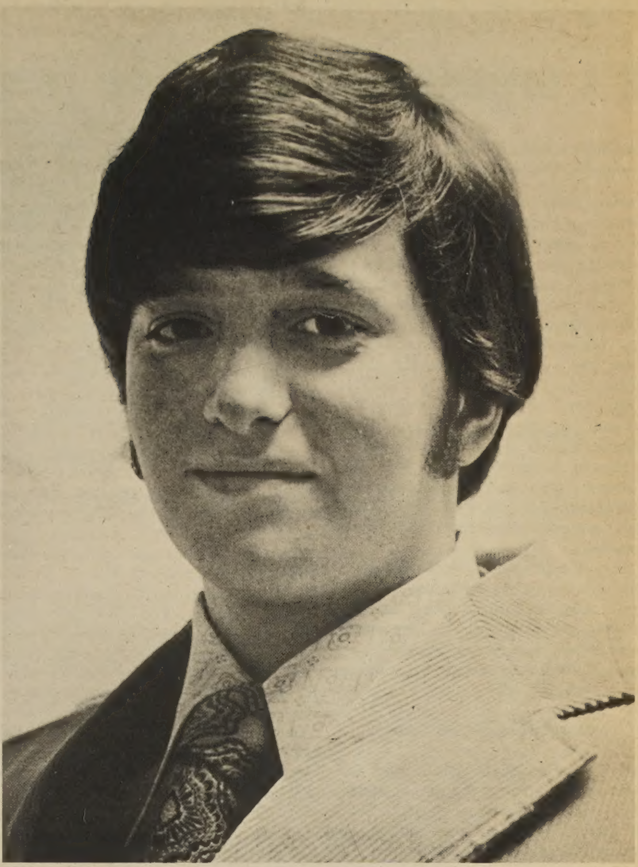
Hershberger to assume alumni relations post



Right: Hershberger to alumni relations

John K. Hershberger, 21, is Goshen College's new director of alumni relations and will assume his responsibilities on July 6 from John L. Frankenfield, who has served at the post since 1968.

Hershberger, a history major, will complete his last course for the B.A. degree this summer, and his work will begin at the outset of the 1973 fiscal year. He will work with regional clubs, committees and the board of the alumni association on homecoming, reunions, "alumni college," and other alumni events, and direct and carry out the annual fund. He will be, ex officio, executive secretary of the Alumni Association.

Daniel Kauffman, director of college relations, said about Hershberger, "We searched all over for the right man — one who will be able to cross an age span of nearly a century long covering 12,000 alumni."

Hershberger, self-conscious about his age for such a responsible post, said one of the things he wants to do is increase student understanding of alumnihood. "At times students conveniently forget tuition covers only three-fourths of the cost of education."

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Hershberger, John is a native of Middlebury, Ind. He was valedictorian of his high school graduating class of 1968. In April he was married to the former Diana Nafziger, a native of Goshen and a 1971 grad currently a caseworker for the Elkhart County welfare department.

Frankenfield, 25, is the college's new director of community relations. In his four years in alumni work he carried out a major constitutional change to make the Alumni Association and its board more effective, and saw a 31 per cent growth in number of givers and a 53 per cent increase in dollars given to the alumni annual fund.

At his new post he will work in Elkhart County with business and industry, clubs, and chambers of commerce and be responsible for the annual Elkhart County giving program for capital development and improvement at GC.

GC grads took part in a national survey

Alumni talk on the worth of liberal arts

By ROBERT CALVERT JR.

The results of a mid-1960's study of 11,000 liberal arts alumni may help evaluate the merits of liberal education as preparation for employment in today's world.

Reporting in the survey were graduates drawn from 100 cooperating colleges and universities including Goshen College. They were asked how they appraised their careers and the adequacy of liberal education for both careers and personal lives.

The sample was based upon male graduates surveyed five, ten, and fifteen years after college. Women were omitted from the survey solely for reasons of economy as relatively fewer would have had employment records to report.[1]

The complete survey was recently published in book form Career Patterns of Liberal Arts Graduates (Carroll Press, Cranston, R.I.), and this article highlights a few of the results.[2]

Half of alumni in private sector

Historically, liberal arts alumni entered the three traditional fields of teaching, preaching and healing. Even today a myth exists that most liberal arts alumni either teach or work for a non-profit agency.

This is simply not true of the liberal arts graduates in mid-career. Half of the alumni reported that they were in private enterprise and only a third teach or are in government service. The largest single block of graduates is found in fiscal office and management occupations.

Alumni highly satisfied

A series of questions dealt with satisfaction with employers, occupations, and career lives. Liberal arts graduates are highly satisfied with the work they are doing: 69 per cent like their jobs very much and 22 per cent fairly much.

Older alumni report the most satisfaction, possibly reflecting greater tolerance toward job limitations and a seniority status which provides more challenging job assignments. A fairly high level of satisfaction also was expressed toward the current employer. Only 11 per cent of the alumni definitely wished they were working for another employer, while 18 per cent were not sure. Fortunately for the egos of the men involved, and interesting from a research point of view, two-thirds of the graduates said their careers were more successful than those of their classmates.

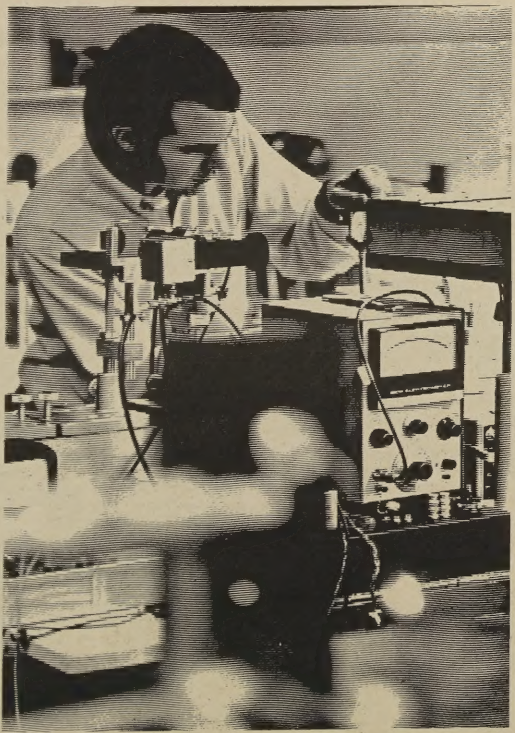
Small number would change

When asked if they wished that they were in another occupation, 10 per cent of the graduates said they wished they were doing something else. However, only 3 1/2 per cent said they definitely would change and another 8 per cent said they probably would change.

Some interesting occupational preferences were listed by those graduates who wished they had chosen another field. By far the greatest swing would be to careers in college teaching, medicine, and creative arts (architecture, journalism, art, public relations, radio-TV) and the strongest movement would be away from military service, state and local government, and the clergy.

Few stay in first job

A Rutgers University alumnus said, "The liberal arts graduate should not begin his first job with the intention of remaining with the particular employer or that particular career." This summed up the record of this alumni group: five years after graduation, 56 per cent had changed employers at least once. Fifteen years after graduation, 76 per cent had changed at least once. Most of the graduates had little experience with unemployment. Only 10 per cent had been out of work for as long as five months and much of this may have been the result of waiting for military service or for graduate school courses.



Fifty-five per cent of the majors of sciences and mathematics from 100 colleges and universities —including Goshen —said they would repeat their major. Science and math commanded the highest loyalty of all majors among alumni, whether they had been graduated 5, 10, or 15 years ago.

CALVERT has been active in guidance and placement for 20 years as administrator, lecturer, consultant and teacher. He has served with the Peace Corps as Director of the Career Information Service and, later, as Director of the Office of Volunteer Support. Before accepting his Peace Corps assignment, Dr. Calvert was manager of the student and alumni placement center at the University of California in Berkeley.

The only major complaint had to do with salaries: 8.6 per cent greatly disliked and 20 per cent slightly disliked the income from their jobs.

A key question asked, "To what extent do you agree or disagree with the statement that your undergraduate training provided good preparation for your vocational life?" The responses indicated generally good support for liberal arts education:

Strongly agree	17%
Agree	56%
Disagree	22%
Strongly disagree	5%
	100%

Liberal arts education evaluated

Despite their frequent complaints as undergraduates, most liberal arts alumni would attend the same college if they were starting over again. Over 86 per cent of the graduates would attend the same institution. Some would elect a different field for their college major as follows:

Would repeat original liberal arts major	49%
Would switch to a different liberal arts major	32%
Would major in a non-liberal arts field	14%
No answer	5%
	100%

Loyalty to college major varied by type of field. In the sciences and mathematics, 55 per cent would repeat their major in contrast to 53 per cent for the humanities and 44 per cent for the social sciences. Eighty per cent of the alumni would advise a high school graduate to take a liberal arts major.

As might be expected, there were strong comments made by some alumni against liberal education. These were illustrative:

> "Everyone needs two educations — one with which to earn a living and the other to make life rich and full," by an alumnus of University of Southern California.

> "Liberal arts contributes to fascinating undergraduate discussions. But what is the graduate to do when he has to support a family? Perhaps he can become a schoolteacher as I did. But then he can't afford the very things he has learned to appreciate," by an alumnus of Arizona State University.

These were the minority. Many more comments supported liberal education in roughly the same five out of six ratio as reported in the statistical evaluation.

> "Most of the fields I have worked in are not covered by specific college courses," by an Ohio State University alumnus.

> "Stick to your educational goals and avoid treating college as a trade school," by an Oberlin College alumnus.

> "The world is changing too fast to tie yourself to a career. The best a person can do is to select the broadest possible field. The one in which I am working did not exist 30 years ago and was only added to the curriculum at my Alma Mater five or six years ago. The solution is to prepare for a career by learning as much as you can about as many things as you can encompass," by a Wayne State University alumnus.

Recommendations from graduates

Their single greatest career problem was obtaining the first job after college.

> "One employer commented to me, 'You have a fine background but what are you going to do with it and how does it apply to your possible employment with us?' " by a New York University alumnus.

> "Although I was graduated near the top of a class of 1,700, not one firm contacted me about employment while mediocre engineers received at least a dozen offers," by a University of Southern California alumnus.

This highlights the great irony in most collegiate programs of career assistance. The most sophisticated help is available for the students who least need it. On major university campuses, too often students graduating in engineering and business administration are served by much stronger placement programs than their classmates in liberal arts. For too many independent liberal arts colleges, there is a marked discrepancy between the budget and staff for the admissions function and that provided for job counseling and placement. This lack of assistance was indicated in these comments made by alumni:

> "A better job of career counseling could be done by the liberal arts college. I wasted some time which might have been spent in more constructive pursuits," by a Colgate University alumnus.

> "Better vocational counseling during college would have raised me to an equivalent economic level five years ago," by a Brooklyn College alumnus.

> "My college guidance and placement assistance was not strong enough so that I could find a worthwhile job," by a Duke University alumnus.

Better career counseling and placement should reduce subsequent job changes — changes which are costly to employers and contribute to some of their resistance to hiring liberal arts alumni. In no way need vocational awareness detract from the emphasis upon a broad liberal education. However, the student who majors in French, anthropology, or botany should know whether he wants to work as a teacher, a salesman, a foreign service officer or a hospital administrator — and be able to tell an employer why he wants such a career.

Alumni report that their most useful courses in later life were those in three of the basic education fields — English, mathematics and psychology. They support the concept of broad training fitting the alumnus for a life with infinite occupational possibilities. Most seem to agree with a statement made by John Ciardi when he was on the faculty at Rutgers University. The present poetry editor of The Saturday Review said:

> "The best product we can hope for — and a high product it is when achieved — is a man of general culture. This is what we have to offer at our best. If we can turn out such men, management will then have a responsible and responsive personality to work with. This is what we have to offer. And this we can achieve when we seek the liberal arts for their own sake."[3]

Mininger reports on Russia

'The people of Russia have neither religious nor political freedom as we know it in America'

By JANICE RASLEY

"It was exciting, interesting and enriching," Paul Mininger, former GC president, says about his summer of '71 trip through Russia, Poland, and Czechoslovakia.

Dr. and Mrs. Mininger took the trip with a part of the love gift from alumni upon his retirement from the presidency in 1970. Currently he is director of the Center for the Study of Christian Higher Education.

In Russia the Miningers visited Leningrad, Moscow, Kiev, Zaporozhye and several smaller cities, and made stops in Warsaw, Poland, and Prague, Czechoslovakia. The leader of their tour, which included 50 travelers, was Cornelius Krahn of Bethel College, Newton, Kan. The Miningers saw the usual tourist sights, but also had special meetings with government and church leaders and university professors arranged through the Institute for Russian-American Relations.

Mininger had three interests on the trip: a better understanding of the workings of the Russian social system, a clearer picture of how the church functions in Communist countries, and firsthand observation of the Russian educational program.

Incomplete Communism

"Russia has not fully achieved a complete Communist order," he says, because the inequality of earned income naturally creates an inequality of ownership of material goods. The Russian economy seems good and there is no unemployment. Russia lost 20,000,000 people during World War II, and its population is just now returning to a prewar census. The national average family has only 1.5 children and the government urges larger families.

He was surprised at the amount of money the Russian people seem to have, and reported lines at counters for luxury items like jewelry, as well as for necessities. From 3 to 5 per cent of a Russian's income goes for his housing, nearly all in apartments. For the Russian factory worker, life centers in "the plant," which is the community center. Nominations for public office are made at the factory among fellow workers.

Farmers are wealthiest

The Miningers visited a collective farm operated by a group of authorized farmers. The government buys a certain amount of their produce and any left over can be disposed of by the group. Other farmers had their own small acreage and could dispose of their produce as they wished. Farmers seemed to be the wealthiest in Russia.

Nearly every area in Russia had a "palace of culture" and Mininger felt that the country's leaders are trying to provide for some of the people's noneconomic needs through these centers. There is much fine entertainment in Russia plus accomplished musicians. The Miningers enjoyed the opera in Moscow and found it "very inexpensive, with all kinds of people attending."

'Religion unnecessary'

Discussing the future of religion, Mininger was told by a Russian newspaper reporter that Russia has proved that all man's needs can be satisfied with economic progress, thus there is no need for a religion. The Mennonite Church is active in Russia, Mininger was told, when some Russian Mennonites, who had relatives in the Miningers' tour group, came to visit. There is vitality in their church, they said, and they are encouraged by the number of young persons beginning to take an active part in the church. The church, however, is limited to strictly religious concerns, and no position can be taken on any political or legal issues, such as divorce or abortion. Mininger said, "It is clear that the people of Russia have neither religious freedom nor political freedom as we know it in America."

The Miningers have lasting impressions of the beautiful Russian cathedrals, their art work, and ornate shrines and architecture. Many buildings have been restored and are well cared for, but the tourist is told that they are no longer for worship, but are museums and are preserved for cultural and historical purposes. Here Mininger felt that these great churches, so long identified with a political or ruling power and insensitive to the needs of their parishioners, had met their own destruction.

Religious freedom in Poland

In Poland the Miningers found a more liberal way of life than they had expected. The church was doing well and the people had complete freedom of worship and were able to transmit their faith.

Prague, Czechoslovakia, however, was a different place. The Russian army was camped outside the city. Visiting a Moravian church in Prague, Mininger found the minister discouraged. A guide told the tour group, in secret, that though the Czechoslovakian people had an eight-month taste of liberty, they now see no hope of change in their country. Another minister, a former Yale student, told Mininger that Christians in his country are not heroes, they have learned that they do not need some things that were once important, and they now merely try to stand for Christ's teachings.

Asking what gives meaning to the life of the average citizen in Russia or Poland, whose life has improved during the past years, Mininger was told that people live for the good of their fellowman and their neighbor, not their state. Because this is true, there is a common ground between the goals of the church and the goals of the people.

"The one privileged class in Russia," Mininger says, "is the children." Education is free and a youngster can go as far as his capabilities allow. He was impressed with the importance the Russians place on education. One third of the total Russian population is either studying or teaching.

Russians affirm peace stance

The Russians are much concerned about their impression on Americans, Mininger feels, and they have difficulty understanding why America turned against them after their revolution and why America will not trade non-military goods. Even though Mininger expressed some disbelief, the Russians he talked with always affirmed their country's desire for peace and pointed out that the principle of co-existence was declared by Lenin. When questioned about the 1968 invasion of Czechoslovakia, the Russians were quite frank to say the invasion was caused by border troubles and it is necessary for Russia to have friendly neighbors on all sides since historically her problems have usually begun at her borders. Russia cannot afford a war because she needs to develop her country economically and no one benefits from a war in Russia like certain interests do in America. The Russian people seemed very dedicated to their kind of society, Mininger concluded.

"We are very grateful to the Goshen College alumni for making this trip possible," Mininger says, "and we are eager to go back." Since his return Mininger has given several talks about his trip. He calls his travelogue, "A Glimpse Behind the Iron Curtain."

Eleven clubs meet in winter and spring

In the four months, February through May, 11 regional clubs have met, most of them in the West where there has been limited club activity in the recent past.

J. Lawrence Burkholder '39, president of Goshen College, spoke at each of the six western clubs on his whirlwind get-acquainted tour March 10-20. Mrs. Burkholder '37 was with him.

- Forty-five were present at Ruth's Oven in Colorado Springs, Colo., March 10. Mrs. Anita Beadles '61 was in charge of the planning.
- Ninety-one were at Bernard's Restaurant, Arvada, Colo., for a meeting of the Denver area alumni on March 11. Mel Birky '62 did the planning.
- Jake Rittenhouse '64 was in charge of the planning for the dinner meeting at Sir George's, Phoenix, Ariz., on March 13. Ninety-four were present.
- Mrs. Lester C. Reeser '44 was in charge of planning the Los Angeles meeting March 15. It was at Inglewood Golf Range and 38 attended.
- Floyd R. Lapp '61 and Mrs. Bernard Showalter '52, of Salem, Oreg., planned the March 18 meeting for Oregon alumni. It was at King's Table, Salem.
- Orval Shoemaker '41 planned the Hesston, Kans., dinner meeting, at Colonial House, Hesston, March 20.

Burkholder spoke before 94 Phoenix alumni at a March 13 dinner.

Burkholder also spoke at the Northwestern Ohio club meeting. It was in the community room of Farmers and Merchants Bank, Archbold, Ohio, May 13, with 52 present. The planning committee was Ellis Croyle '62, president, and Sandra Richer Tinsler '66, secretary. Elected president was Donald Jantzi '58.

In his addresses, Burkholder said, "We think of ourselves as citizens of the world devoted to Christian principles. We try to identify with needs of the world in peaceful ways." He recognized problems facing private colleges, spoke optimistically of trends at Goshen, and noted a growing spiritual awareness and concern on the part of students.

Other club meetings were in Ohio, Iowa, and Pennsylvania in late winter and spring.

Norman L. Kauffmann, associate dean of students, spoke at the Holmes County alumni club meeting Feb. 19 at Der Dutchman Restaurant, of Walnut Creek, Ohio. Twenty-four were present for the family-style chicken and ham dinner. In charge of arrangements were Dr. Robert Gerber '61, president; Miriam Miller Weaver '68, secretary; and Vernon Miller '37, past president. Elected were Robert Hamsher '58, president; Sturges Miller '43, vice-president; and Muriel Troyer '64, secretary.

Kauffmann also spoke before the Eastern Pennsylvania club at a dinner meeting at the Holiday Inn, Kulpsville, Pa., May 6. Seventy were on hand to hear Kauffmann and four students, Evangeline Beachy, Arthur Griffin, Fred Kauffman, and Minh Nguyen sing and speak informally. Officers of the club were Ralph Hunsberger '56, chairman; Kermit Yoder '64, chairman-elect; Jane Alderfer '61, secretary-treasurer. Wayne Clemens '59 was elected chairman-elect.

Henry D. Weaver Jr., dean and provost-elect, spoke to the 51 present at the Iowa alumni regional club buffet dinner at The Captain's Table, Washington, on March 18. President of the club was Dr. Orie J. Gingerich '48; secretary, Mrs. Marie Herner '29. Mrs. Arlene Wenger '63 was elected chairman and Mrs. Herner was re-elected secretary.

Carl Kreider '36, provost and former dean, spoke on "Mennonites in the '70's" at the Southwestern Ohio club April 29. Sixty were present at the Bob "N" Restaurant, Bellefontaine, for a ham or T-bone dinner. On the committee were Roberta Schertz Graber '57, Mary Kay Fisher Regier '50, and Mary Wolber Steiner '55.

and Mrs. Paul Rohrer '67, returned home in July after 30 months of service in the Santa Cruz area of Bolivia, under MCC. They were working in agriculture and Bible classes.

Gifts honor Miss Widmer, key figure in setting up GC nursing program

A gift to Goshen College from the estate of Esther Widmer, R.N., a graduate of the Class of '37, plus a gift in her memory by a brother, Dr. Reuben B. Widmer '40, Winfield, Iowa, were received with grateful appreciation this spring.

Miss Widmer who gave a lifetime of service to nursing, was a graduate of the Goshen Academy, then returned to the college in the mid '30's for the B.A. degree after attending La Junta Mennonite Nursing School and working four years in the Washington, Iowa, hospital.

She returned to northern Indiana in 1949, the choice of both Elkhart General Hospital and Goshen College to be director of nursing services at the hospital and a key figure in setting up the hospital's clinical facilities for the collegiate-level nursing program, begun in 1950. The nursing care procedures she developed were followed by GC students as they received their preparation at the hospital. She also helped plan the clinical field for students, attended GC nursing faculty meetings, and taught parts of the pharmacology course.

Miss Widmer paved the way for the fine cooperation between the college and the hospital which continues to the current day.

Dr. Carl Kreider, then dean now provost, remembers her as "tall, stately, with natural reserve. She reminds me of Sanford C. Yoder, another child of Iowa, who had many the same qualities," he said.

Miss Orpah Mosemann, founding director of GC's nursing division, remembers her as "attractive, calm, kind, and thoughtful. She supported the collegiate-level nursing program and had a deep interest in its students."

A nursing educator and administrator, Miss Widmer took up her Elkhart post after experience as education director at Washington Boulevard Hospital of Chicago, director of Mennonite School of Nursing of Bloomington, Ill., director of nursing education at Grant Hospital of Chicago, and director of nurses at Peoria (Ill.) Methodist Hospital.

The recent gifts were not the first to express Miss Widmer's close ties with Goshen College. In 1956 she and her brother, Dr. J. Glen Widmer, Wayland, Iowa, set up a loan fund for nursing students. She was also a faithful supporter of the alumni annual fund.

Miss Widmer left Elkhart in 1956 to help care for her aging parents in Iowa and be an office nurse in Wayland. In 1961 she accepted a clinical research position at the University Hospital of Iowa City, a post she held until 1967. Until 1970 she was on the nursing staff at Oak Lawn Nursing Home, of Iowa City. She died at age 66 on Nov. 30, 1971, at Wayland after an extended illness.

John's final jottings

In reviewing the past four years of work with GC alumni, many persons, faces and events come to mind. They are memorable and far too numerous to mention. I'd rather refer to the years as extremely rewarding.

To see first hand the dedication of alumni has been my greatest pleasure. It's been humbling at times, too. The hours of volunteer work of the Alumni Fund chairmen, agents, and phonothon workers. The meetings of the Alumni Association board and committees. The arrangements carried out by the regional Alumni Club officers. All add to the excitement, demands and fun of the four years just past.

It won't be easy to cut myself from alumni activities in July when John Hershberger '72 becomes director of alumni relations and executive secretary of the Alumni Association. I've told John what great friends and supporters Goshen's alumni are, and that he'll enjoy the spirit and interest among them which I've enjoyed.

As I leave the alumni relations desk for the community relations desk, thank you, Goshen alumni, for believing in Goshen College and making my work worthwhile.

Would you like a check from Goshen College?

Consider the case of John R, who receives a check every three months — quarterly — from Goshen College.

John R is 75 and has been retired for 10 years. He is "sold" on Goshen College and its Gift Annuity program. He will receive a guaranteed fixed income of $700 a year — $175 every quarter — for the rest of his life. This compares to $425 a year he would receive if his $10,000 were still in a savings account rather than at Goshen College under a Charitable Gift Annuity agreement.

John R sees other advantages beside increased annual income.

- Lower income tax payments, since $414.05 of the $700 annuity income will be tax free (every penny of the $425 annual interest on his savings was taxable)
- A contribution tax deduction of $4,438.50 in the year he have his $10,000 for the Gift Annuity. (If this deduction is greater than 5 per cent of his adjusted gross income, he can carry the balance forward for five additional years.)
- The satisfaction of knowing that, at his death, the endowment fund of Goshen College will be richer by the residue of his gift.
- The joy of knowing that he has made his money immortal by investing it in the Christian education of young persons.

John R learned that by giving he could receive MORE. Proportional results are obtained for smaller or larger gifts. (If John R's wife were living and if her age were also 75, the guaranteed income from Goshen College would be $590 a year as long as either lived. A large portion of these payments also would be tax free. Also, if John R and his wife would have appreciated securities, greater tax savings may be theirs by giving the securities rather than cash.)

Adelphian Fountain is restored

Restoration of the historic Adelphian Fountain has been completed, thanks to a gift of $2,000 from members of the class of '16 on the occasion of its 55th anniversary of its graduation.

Contributions for the project were made by members of the class or in memory of its alumni, to memorialize the class sponsor, Daniel S. Gerig. Gerig was registrar at Goshen in the early 1900's and was later dean and professor of German, Greek, and Latin. He died October 2, 1955, at the age of 80.

The fountain, at the north entrance of the Administration Building, was built in the spring of 1904 by the C.M.A. (Coming Men of America) Debating Club, later adopting the name, Adelphians.

Rebuilding of the fountain restored it to its original beauty and decor. New pipes and drain were installed and a new foundation and pool of reinforced concrete were poured. The old stone base was cleaned and repaired. The large basin of the fountain structure was repaired and the small basin was recast. The sidewalk around the fountain was also replaced.

Adelphian Fountain and Kulp Hall

The only change from the former design was brick sidewalk edging between the pool and the concrete sidewalk. It replaces the narrow circular stand of grass.

Leaders of the class of '16 in raising the funds were Elmer E. Lehman and Solomon E. Yoder.

Zuercher is '73 Fund national chairman

Wants to surpass '72 Fund record

William R. Zuercher, Harlan, Ky., who stepped from administrative executive in Appalachian Regional Hospitals to administrator and chief executive officer of ARH's Harlan Community Health Center on June 1, is 1973 Alumni Fund national chairman.

Zuercher, a 1958 GC graduate, will be an important link between the College and alumni in surpassing last year's alumni giving of $171,237. He was at Goshen on August 12 to accept his responsibilities, chart the operation of the fund with the alumni fund committee, and guide the selection of class agents.

On the fund committee are Robert Hartzler '41, Mrs. W. Paul (Retha Hostetler '36) Kauffman, David G. Lehman '50, Clarence Leichty '49, Chester Peachey '62, Jay Springer '68.

Zuercher was positive about the key role of the class agents. Each will send a series of letters to inform class members about the necessity of their annual support to Goshen.

"It is important," Zuercher said, "that the agents be dependable and prompt in their letters requesting gifts. Once a person has responded, he will receive no more letters about the fund during the year."

One of Zuercher's goals is to increase the number of alumni giving support. Last year 3106 alumni gave, 127 more than 1971. Of them, 278 were first-time donors. In addition, 676 donors had not given in 1971.

Zuercher wants to stimulate alumni loyalty among all past donors as well as motivate non-donors to take part in the fund. His job is a big one. Last year 12,367 alumni received invitations to give, but only 25.3 per cent responded positively.

Other aspects of the fund will be phonothons in geographical areas of alumni concentration. Last year phonothon gifts totaled $12,843, an increase of $1881 over gifts in the 1971 telephone campaign.

Regular annual giving by alumni confirms and strengthens their support of the value of its educational programs, Zuercher stressed. A favorite argument is, "If alumni think their alma mater is worthy of support and respond generously, many others will look with favor on it — including church, business and industry, foundations, and friends."

Eager for community betterment

Zuercher, 35, and a native of Nampa, Idaho, has given all his time since college graduation to programs of social and community betterment.

He was European area business manager for the Mennonite Central Committee at Frankfurt/Main, Germany, 1958-60. On return to the States, he was GC's assistant business manager, 1960-62, and administrator of Brook Lane Psychiatric Center, Hagerstown, Md., 1962-66.

From 1966 to 1968 he studied hospital administration at Duke University and was administrative resident at two North Carolina hospitals. He received the M.H.A. degree in 1968.

Beginning in June 1968 he has been on the administrative team of Appalachian Regional Hospitals, first as assistant administrator at Harlan. Responsibility was added to him in November, 1969, when he was appointed acting administrator, a part-time post, at Whitesburg.

In July, 1970, he was named special assistant to the president of ARH and administrator of Clover Fork Outpatient Medical Project, Evarts. In September, 1971, he was named administrator of the Harlan Extended Care Facility.

At his newest post, Zuercher is responsible for a 179-bed hospital, 50-bed extended care facility, a home care service, the ARH School of Professional Nursing, and schools for training laboratory technicians and nurse anesthetists. The services are under the umbrella of the ARH non-profit health care system with ten centers and related services in Kentucky, Virginia, and West Virginia.

Interested in a vast range of activities, he is a member of numerous boards and organizations dealing with mental health, mental retardation, hospital administration, clinical pastoral education, social welfare, the performing arts, and youth programs in Appalachia. In addition, he is a member of the board and treasurer of Mennonite Mental Health Services, a member of the board and treasurer of Mennonite Mutual Aid Association, Inc., and vice-chairman of health and welfare for Mennonite Board of Missions.

He is a member of the American College of Hospital Administrators and a member of the Kentucky Hospital Association and vice-chairman of its council on hospital nursing.

Zuercher is married to the former Joyce Gingerich '58, and they have three children — Melanie, 11; Andrea, 10; and Edward, 7.

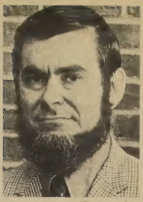
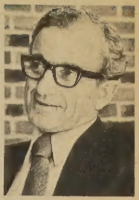
Two Overseers named



Long



Miller

A Goshen College alumnus and a father of four GC alumni are new members of the 12-member Board of Overseers, the college's board of control.

Elected were Kenneth M. Long '54, assistant dean and associate professor of chemistry at Westminster College, New Wilmington, Pa., and Marner Miller, chairman of the board of Travel Equipment Corporation and president of E-Z Gas Company, Goshen, Ind.

Long, who taught in Arkansas and later in Michigan high schools, received the M.A.T. at Michigan State U. in 1960 and attended the National Science Foundation Academic Year Institute for Science Teachers at Ohio State University, 1961-62. In 1962 he joined the faculty at Westminster. He received the Ph.D. in inorganic chemistry from Ohio State U. in 1967.

Mrs. Long is the former Nancy Lou Yoder '53. They have five children, ages 8 through 17.

Miller is a Northern Indiana businessman who has lived close to the college for more than two decades and been active in a variety of church assignments. He was a founder of E-Z Gas Company in 1950 and has been its president since 1962. He is a member of the board of Greencroft Villa, a retirement center, and a former member of the board of Hope Rescue Mission, South Bend.

Mrs. Miller is the former Lola Hochstetler. Their three sons and daughter are Marlin '60, Shirley '64 (Mrs. Lowell Miller), David '65, and Larry '71.

Alumni: be aggressive in recruiting students

A stronger, more intense effort to recruit students is the goal of the 1972-73 Alumni Admissions Council, headed by voulnteer Arlene (Martin '55) Mark, of Elkhart, Ind.

Mrs. Mark, believing that Goshen has something unusual to offer in its college programs, reports that freshman applications jumped 60 per cent from a community last year because of alumni efforts in recruitment.

"This success can be duplicated in other areas," John M. Zook, director of admissions, says. "I urge alumni to talk to qualified students, set up special occasions like Coke parties for high school juniors and seniors, visit high school guidance counselors, spread the word that GC has unique programs in such areas as international education and solid state physics."

Regional club officers are being asked to help provide manpower and volunteers. The admissions office is ready to provide back-up materials, ideas, and suggestions to kick off recruitment efforts. Any alumnus, however, is invited to send names and addresses of prospective students at any time. The admissions office will follow up with materials and an invitation to visit campus.

If you know of high school students who should know about Goshen College, please clip and mail today.

Homecoming to be scheduled during special festival

"Homecoming will receive new emphasis beginning this year," John K. Hershberger, GC's new director of alumni relations, said in announcing the direction given by the board of the Alumni Association.

The board of directors, the policy-making group of the Association, met the morning of Alumni Day, June 17, and spoke to a number of issues, including the waning interest in the traditional autumn homecoming weekend.

In reviewing the two major weekend celebrations at GC in 1971-72, the board proposed that homecoming for alumni be included as part of future festivals. The board noted that numerous alumni returned for events of Believers Church Heritage Week and inauguration weekend last October, and for the Festival of the Holy Spirit in May.

"These events clearly attract alumni," Hershberger said, "and it makes a lot of sense to schedule a special get-together, or dinner, for them when they are on campus."

Planning for the homecoming of the 1972-73 school year is tentative, Hershberger said, but a special event is being considered for the spring. Alumni will be kept up to date through issues of the Newsletter and Bulletin.

In other business conducted, the board reappointed the members of the executive board whose terms expired in 1972 for another two-year term to maintain continuity as Hershberger begins his work. Those accepting reappointment were Gregory Hartzler '66, Dale Swartzendruber '50, and Mrs. Carl (Phyllis Yoder '57) Yoder. Declining reappointment was John Smith '61, who will be teaching in Newfoundland 1972-74 and would not be able to take part in the meetings. Selection of his successor was not firm as the Newsletter went to press.

The board urged regional clubs to recruit students and select admissions chairmen to counsel prospective students and arrange for them to visit campus.

Just ahead: 10 pages of names of alumni

In this issue, in honor-roll style, are listed alumni who made a gift to the 1972 Fund.

If you would like to join the 1973 honor roll, all you need to do is make a gift of any sort for Goshen College through the Alumni Annual Fund.

Your gift may be cash, check, or in the form of securities, real property, objects of art, or books. When the annual report for 1973 is published, your name will be listed (but not the amount of the gift).

Remember, every gift of any sort is sincerely appreciated.

An open letter to alumni who took part in the 1972 Fund

Dear Alumni:

Last year the Alumni Fund broke another record by totaling $171,236.90! That was $13,281.31 in excess of the previous year. I want to express my personal appreciation to all of you and to report that we came through the fiscal year without a deficit. We are, therefore, in a position to concentrate upon the quality of education and not merely upon survival. Although new programs these days must be considered carefully, we want to remain innovative and free to experiment.

Alumni gifts make an important contribution to the operating budget. Therefore, those who give so generously and regularly literally make the school run. The dependence of the school upon the alumni really means that we are all in this together.

Thank you again for your fine support.

Sincerely,

J. Lawrence Burkholder

About this honor roll

On these pages are the names of those 3,106 alumni who gave a total of $171,236.90 for the benefit of Goshen College in the fiscal year, July 1, 1971, through June 30, 1972.

There were gifts from almost every state, every province of Canada, and many foreign countries.

On behalf of Goshen College and the Alumni Association, I hope that through the publication of this Honor Roll those whose names appear will be accorded a measure of recognition they so well deserve.

If your name does not appear or is incorrectly recorded, we ask you to excuse us and request you provide us with the correct information.

What's an envelope doing here?

Primarily, it's a way to make feedback possible to the Alumni Office from you.

Perhaps you have some important news — a promotion, a new job, an important community responsibility, a baby to announce. Or maybe you've just been married. Be sure to let us in on the details in time for the next Newsletter.

Or, maybe you want some information about GC. Or its programs. Or you have a question you want answered or a suggestion you want to offer. Do you have a list of names and addresses of local high school students who might consider Goshen? Use the envelope to send them.

You may even want to use it for your contribution to the 1973 Alumni Fund. Your gift now, incidentally, will automatically remove your name from the mailing list of the agent of your class for the rest of this fiscal year (to June 30, 1973).

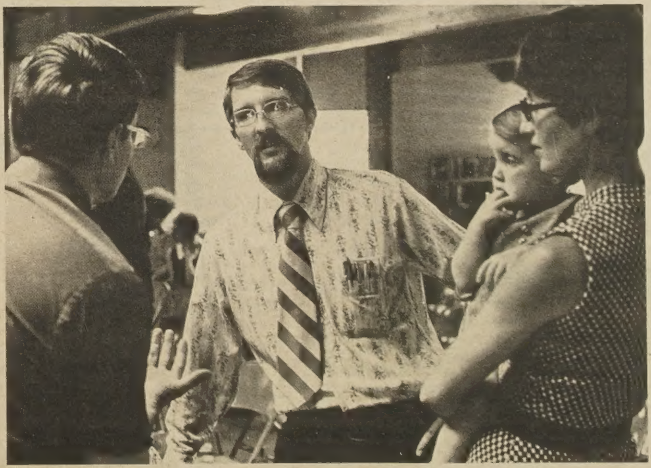
Class of '62 meets for 10-year reunion



Among the 70 adults and 54 children attending the 1962 chicken barbecue and class reunion at Bethany Christian High School on Alumni Day were: (left to right) Glen Good, Elkhart, IN; James Eigsti, Lubbock, TX; and Diane (Gerber '63) Eigsti holding daughter Inge Marie.

'65 nurses have big weekend

The Class of '65 nurses reunion during Alumni Weekend featured Bonnie Daniels (center), Elkhart County public welfare caseworker, speaking on adoption of foster children, and Frances (Zimmerman) Wenger, GC professor, speaking on the revised nursing curriculum. Twenty alumnae attended the program, arranged by Pam (Miller) Eash, of Goshen. The '65 group continued their visiting at a dinner at Das Dutchman Essenhaus the evening of Alumni Day and at a picnic at Ox Bow Park Sunday noon.

IN APPRECIATION OF VOLUNTEERS
1971-1972

A good many things that supposedly "go without saying" should really be said. In this instance, we're going to say them.

We want to recognize publicly the hours and labors of our gracious volunteers. Class agents for the Alumni Fund. Telephone callers for the Alumni Phonothon. Organizers of regional club meetings. Chairmen for class reunions on Alumni Day. Student recruiters under the direction of the Alumni Admissions Council. Alumni serving as counselors to their congregations. Members of the annual fund committee and the executive board of the Alumni Association.

Among the exciting things is the number of non-alumni who volunteered time and effort to us. They, too, are listed below with an asterisk designation.

In a list like this, one always runs the risk of omitting someone's name who provided valuable time and services. If you are one of those, please excuse us. The list was compiled from programs, correspondence, and notes collected during the year. If you wish, you may take a minute to inform us of the omission, and we'll be grateful.

Thank you again.

John's Jottings

By John K. Hershberger '72, executive secretary of the Alumni Association and director of alumni relations

This is my first year. And I am learning. I have a few ideas and am receiving beneficial counsel.

What I want on a continuing basis is openness and sharing among all the persons involved with Goshen College, especially the alumni. For this underlies one of our basic strengths.

Whether you have a comment or suggestion, counsel or criticism, I assure you it will be read and considered.

Maybe you are unhappy or have a question about Goshen College. Ask for an explanation. You may remain unhappy. But at least you will know why. On the other hand, you might be pleasantly surprised about College decisions and the rationale behind them.

As a recent student, my perspective is that alumni and other supporters are uniting for Goshen. Not in blind acceptance. But in the spirit of constructive, critical human understanding. I am optimistic about GC's future. I am eager that you share this optimism.

GC alumnae may apply for graduate fellowships

The Danforth Foundation announces the ninth competition for its Graduate Fellowships for Women. The objective of the program is to find and develop college and secondary school teachers among that group of American women whose preparation for teaching has been postponed or interrupted. In general, the Fellowships are intended for women who no longer qualify for more conventional fellowship programs or whose candidacy in such programs might be given low priority.

The Fellowships are open to women who hold bachelor's degrees from accredited colleges or universities in the United States (received no later than June, 1973). Appointment is for one year beginning September 1, 1973, and is renewable annually provided the recipient remains in good academic standing and follows the study plan submitted in her application. The stipend will depend on individual need (tuition, books, graduate fees, household help, child care).

Application materials including the Foundation's criteria for selection will be sent upon request. All supporting materials must be received by the Foundation on or before January 12, 1973. Appointments will be announced on or about April 6, 1973. Prospective candidates should request the brochure, "Danforth Graduate Fellowships for Women," which provides full information about this program. Correspondence should be addressed to: Director, Graduate Fellowships for Women, Danforth Foundation, 222 South Central Avenue, St. Louis, MO 63105.

NOTES: Mrs. Joe (Jean Litwiller) Eigsti, Buda, Ill., writes, "This fall we will have three of our four children at Goshen — freshman, sophomore, and senior. If you put Goshen College in your estate planning, you will forever be helping youth meet world needs.

Gene holds Patrick at Mona

For example, there's Patrick. He's 7, an outgoing, talkative youngster, and a fantastic swimmer. He lives at the well-kept government-operated Mona Rehabilitation Center, Kingston, Jamaica. He goes to an experimental school for handicapped children.

One of the important persons in Patrick's life is Gene Short, a Goshen College student. Gene helps with 20 small fry like Patrick during afternoons for seven weeks. He may help them swim, or make and paint toy boats or trucks or racing cars.

Gene is in Jamaica earning college credit on the 14-week Study-Service Trimester overseas. Half his time he studies Jamaica. The other half he gives at Mona to ease one of Jamaica's human problems.

More than 250 GC students choose the Study-Service Trimester every year. Afterward, they test out showing more compassion, warmth, and sensitiveness to others. They're more ready to serve other people and make the world a better place to live in.

The Study-Service Trimester is only one part of GC's program. Another is Community Voluntary Service. Weekly some 350 students brighten lives of youngsters, frustrated teenagers, mental hospital patients, and the handicapped in and near Goshen.

We suggest there's no better way to perpetuate these and other programs than a gift from your estate. Your gift will tell the world you want generations of young persons to help meet its distress and needs. Your gift will pay dividends in getting to the real needs and best interests of society.

Whether your estate be large or modest, the opportunities of what you can do through Goshen College's programs to make the world better are virtually limitless. And the rewards to you can be surprising. Give us just one chance to show you what it can be all about. Write today for more materials and information.

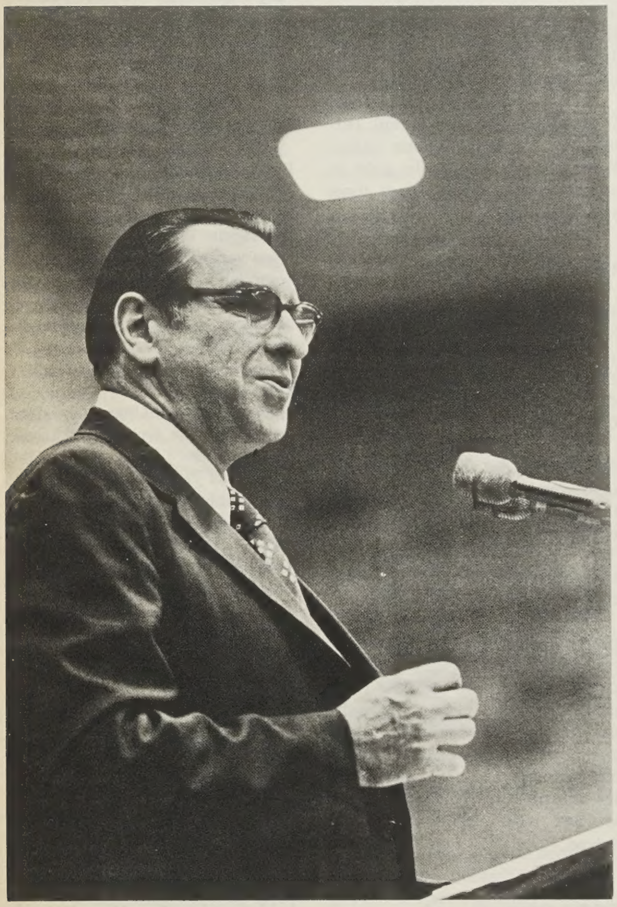
The unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace



J. Lawrence Burkholder, president of Goshen College, was chairman of the Festival committee. The Festival was sponsored by Goshen College and the Associated Mennonite Biblical Seminaries in cooperation with the Central District Conference Mennonites and the Illinois, Indiana-Michigan, and Ohio and Eastern conferences of the Mennonite Church.

By J. LAWRENCE BURKHOLDER

The Festival was a remarkable experience of unity and fellowship. That over 2,000 persons of all ages, cultural levels and theological persuasions could come together to celebrate the work of the Holy Spirit in peace may be accounted for only by the presence of the Spirit Himself. It was a time when love, peace and joy flowed freely in a festive mood.

Singing under the direction of Mary Oyer was fantastic. Seldom if ever has so large and diverse an assembly moved with ease from Bach's "Jesu, Priceless Treasure" to folk songs composed a few days before the Festival. Art as well as music was woven into the fabric of celebration. Young and old sang, prayed and talked together freely.

The addresses were high level and low keyed. There was just enough foresight in planning, finesse in moderation, and reserve to place handclapping and cheers within character — even for most of us cultured intellectuals and members of the establishment.

Experience vs. reflection

One objective of the Festival was to strike a balance between religious experience and reflection. The Festival was intended to be not a study conference nor a catharsis of emotion even though intellectual and emotional elements were present.

The reflective element was represented by 29 "Search and Share" groups which met to consider a broad range of subjects. Discussions on "The Spirit and Psychology," "The Spirit and Marriage," "The Spirit and Creativity" among others were intended to express the vast work of the Spirit. Our intention was clearly to give dignity to the doctrine of the Holy Spirit by recognizing the "fulness," "depth" and "richness" of the life of the Spirit.

Tribute to charismatic power

As sponsors of the Festival, the College and the Associated Mennonite Biblical Seminaries provided a context for the Church to pay tribute to a power at work in many congregations and on the Goshen College campus. That power is sometimes referred to as the Charismatic movement. It takes many forms. It has crossed denominational lines and historical barriers. Sometimes it has become divisive. In general, however, it has introduced a dimension of freedom, individuality and strength into the church.

Above all we are reminded by "neo-pentecostalism" that Christ is alive through the Spirit and at work in the world and especially among His people. The context for the Christian life, therefore, is not simply one of laws and institutions but above all personal relationship. Personalizing life within the church through informal relationships of love, tenderness and joy is what we are receiving from the Spirit at this time.

Students find meaning

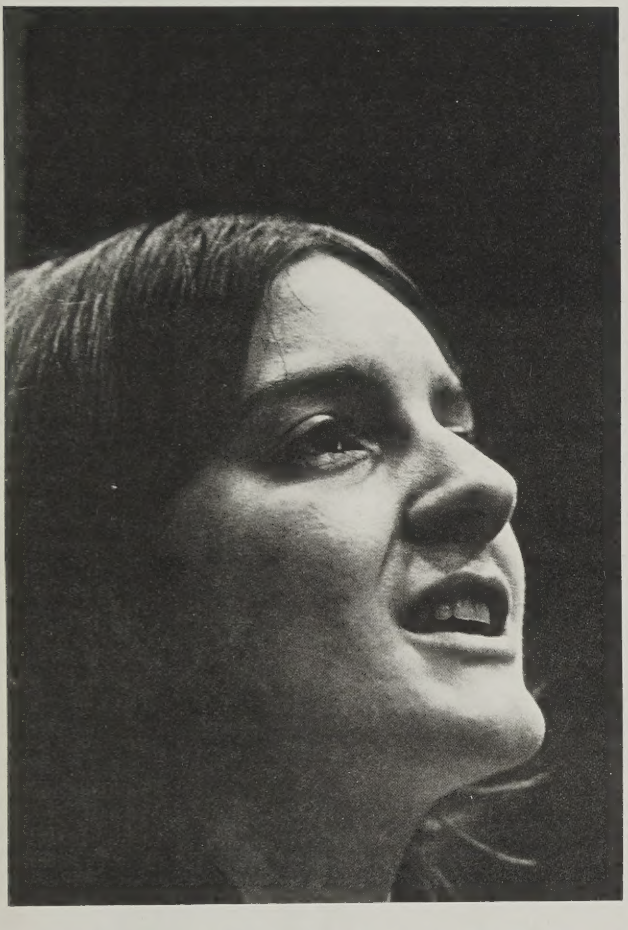
The Festival of the Spirit brought to a fitting climax a year long spiritual development on the campus. Many students struggling with problems of loneliness and alienation have found meaning through commitment to Christ and His church. Some speak of conversion experiences and are responding to an informal and relatively relaxed campus atmosphere to form small fellowship groups.

A number of student fellowships regard themselves as congregations and several groups plan to live family style as worshiping communities. It would appear that the next step in the spiritual renewal movement will be experimental congregations in which "life in the Spirit" will be tried and discussed.

This is an exciting time of great promise for Goshen College and the churches.

A call for greater understanding

Spirit makes life rich and festive, Burkholder says



Attendance numbered more than 1900 registrants, plus many from northern Indiana congregations who did not register. Festival-goers came from Ontario, Manitoba, and British Columbia, and from 20 states, including Oregon, California, Colorado, Florida, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania.

"The Holy Spirit, unpredictable but bountiful and festive, has come to make our lives rich," J. Lawrence Burkholder, Goshen College president, told a capacity Union Auditorium crowd May 19, the opening night of the Festival.

"There is much that is ordinary, drab, routine, and narrow," he said, "but the Holy Spirit makes life rich, and gives it color and freedom and joy and celebration and emotional fulfillment.

"Life is not intended to be drab. It should include what Paul Tillich, the theologian, once called the 'ecstatic.' Life is to be good or as the young people these days say, beautiful."

Church is rich in gifts

Referring to Chapters 12 through 14 of I Corinthians, Burkholder said persons and their gifts are different by God's design. Their differences make for the wealth God desired.

"Not everybody is supposed to have precisely the same experience, or be able to do precisely the same things, or look or talk or act precisely like another person. The Apostle Paul's concept is that there are not just a few fine-feathered, outstanding persons.

"Rather, the church can rejoice because it is rich with many gifts and all kinds of persons. There is good reason to read the New Testament today to regain our self-esteem and self-confidence and give ourselves a sense of worth and strength and power. It is for the church to help decide who we are and what gifts we have received."

Spirit meets man's needs

Two purposes of the Holy Spirit are: (1) to make Christ personal, and (2) to create community.

Burkholder said, "Through the work of the Spirit, the risen Lord is present and a contemporary to us. Indeed, He is ahead of us, is our Counselor, Comforter, One who helps us discern, One who disturbs us, One who assures us we are the children of God. The Spirit meets a basic, absolute need of man, that is, He keeps him from becoming lonely and alienated.

"Second, the Spirit works to bring about love, affection, respect, forgiveness, openness, and understanding in a group of persons called the church."

Burkholder said, "The church has taken many forms in history. It has had great moments, and sorrowful moments as well. It brings persons together, breaks down enmity, removes barriers between Jew and Gentile, man and woman, races and cultures, to make one great family."

Spirit requires surrender

Burkholder pointed to the idea of surrender to the Holy Spirit, stressed in the literature of the Anabaptist fathers. "You give up, open yourself to let the Spirit accomplish His purpose in you. The Spirit works through love that conforms to the nature and teachings of Jesus Christ. Working in love, the Holy Spirit is effective and powerful."

Recognizing that another spirit is loose in the world, Burkholder said he could not answer the question, Why does the Spirit not complete its purpose without further delay? "However, we all know God's love can be spurned and the Holy Spirit quenched. The Holy Spirit is frustrated when men perpetuate wars and violence, and are greedy, insisting on personal security. Surely the Holy Spirit cannot but grieve when bombs fall and persons are burned to death."

Spirit is full of surprise

Deploring the idea that some would relegate the Holy Spirit to fringe groups, the primitives, the uneducated and unsophisticated, Burkholder said, "We will never know Jesus Christ in His reality and mystery and greatness except by depth understanding and experience of the Spirit. We want to dignify the concept of the Spirit, and deepen our understanding of the Spirit in all of life, including marriage, music, art, stewardship, and education.

"It is awfully hard to put the Holy Spirit in a nice, neat, and orderly package. The Spirit, like history, is full of novelty and surprises. The one thing, however, we can say with certainty: the Spirit will be in tune with Jesus Christ. And the age of the Spirit is the age of the Lordship of Christ."

Youth want hope, love, truth, peace

Jesus Movement is answer to youth idealism

"God is doing a new thing with the idealism of today's youth," said Don Williams, college pastor of Hollywood (Calif.) Presbyterian Church, in his address, "The Jesus People and the Church."

Beginning with an analysis of the youth culture, Williams quoted a commentator, "Bob Dylan and John Lennon have done more to move their generation than John Garfield or Benny Goodman or Ernest Hemingway or F. Scott Fitzgerald did to move theirs. Dylan and Lennon and a handful of others have innocently created a life-style so universal there seems something strange about a teenager who hasn't smoked marijuana.

"The language of this life-style is music. Music is the key to this generation, and it is the only place in the mass media where kids editorialize to kids.'

"The creators, the prophets, the priests, and the kings of the culture are all musicians," Williams said.

Youth want hope, love, truth, peace

The youth culture can be summed up in four words: hope, love, truth, and peace. Quoting an SDS leader, Williams said youth "are a generation of believers looking for a cause." The civil rights movement in the South was students going to demand racial justice and peace, and to right the wrongs of oppression of the Blacks, the overhang of a hundred years after the Civil War. Another cause was the war in Vietnam. Another was evident in the children's crusade a little over four years ago — young people getting haircuts and going to New England on behalf of Sen. McCarthy. Because of them, the most powerful man in the world, Lyndon B. Johnson, could not run for a second term.

"The young had hope. But we have recently seen that hope destroyed. The white liberals were rejected by the Black militants. Assassinations marred the political scene. And on Chicago's streets in 1968, hope for this generation died."

Against technological society and intellectual mind games, youth think of love as the quest for community, for relationships, to be personal, "for good vibrations." Williams said, "Even the most outlandishly dressed and freaky dropout says by his bizarre behavior, 'I am a real person and want to be accepted as a person.'

Idealism wiped out by vice, drugs, violence

"But the idealism and longing for love of the flower children, staggered in Greenwich Village and Haight-Ashbury, were wiped out by vice and hard drugs."

Youth also wanted truth — reality, "confrontation beyond the image, beyond propaganda." They wanted inner certainty, inner quality of life. They turned to subjectivity, and one rock musician whined, "There is no good or bad; there are only good feelings and bad feelings."

Williams sized it up: "The quest for truth without authority leads to emptiness. The psychedelic drugs which were to expand people's minds were set aside for hard drugs. The quest for truth ended nodding out in a euphoric fog."

Fourth, youth wanted peace, reverence for life, nonviolence. They searched for it in the Sermon on the Mount, in Gandhi, in Martin Luther King, through drugs, through spirituality, through meditation, through Eastern religion.

But like their other ideals, peace was cracked by riots, violence, Vietnam. The only alternative seemed to be anarchy.

Jesus Movement born out of ashes of idealism

Out of the ashes of their idealism, and ironically enough, in California, the center of sensual pleasure where all is supposed to be golden and beautiful, the Jesus Movement was born. In 1967 "The Living Room," a coffee shop in Haight-Ashbury was opened. In 1968 another was opened in Seattle.

Williams reported, "And in Hollywood in 1968 we opened the Salt Company, bringing to our doorstep a new world of Christians who had gone through the hippy thing and the drug world, had longed for some reality beyond our materialistic and performance oriented society, and had turned in desperation to Jesus Christ as the last, final alternative.

Jesus Movement is answer to youth idealism

Youth find new hope and life

"Their old values found new life in the gospel of Jesus Christ. They found hope for a transformed life and for the future — not in a burned out planet or in ecological disaster, but in the resurrection and in Jesus Christ who promised He would come again.

"I think of Mark, caught in the grip of narcotics, addicted to sleeping pills, taking 11 a day to maintain his habit, and when he wanted to feel really good, went up to 16. He dropped LSD over 500 times, then began shooting heroin. I don't put him down for his drugs. I don't have to tell him he's ruining his life or he's breaking his parents' hearts; he already knows that. But I tell him that what he is longing and searching for in drugs can be found in Jesus Christ and that there is hope and that his life can be transformed.

"I think of John, a homosexual, dishonorable discharge from the Army, seven years a drag queen in Hollywood. I don't put him down for the tragedy of his life, or run from him because he threatens me. I simply reach him with the gospel and tell him he can have a new identity in Jesus Christ."

Youth want Christian family love

Speaking to the dimension of love, community, desire to belong to a family, Williams said, "When we got involved with the drug problem, we got involved with housing. If we want changed lives, we have to give them a changed environment.

"When we opened the doors of Virgil House, an old house on Virgil Street in Hollywood, they began to come and come, and they said again and again, 'This is the first family I've ever had.' One said, 'I came into a Christian house and I came into the love of Christ.'

"We called each other brothers and sisters. We discovered we were the body of Christ together. We found out that if you say to someone, 'God loves you,' you'd better be ready to back it up with your life. If a person's hungry, we give him a meal. If he's sleepy, we give him a place to crash. If he's broke, we give him some money and get him a job."

Youth want evangelism without gimmicks and entertainment

The third facet of the youth idealism is truth, and Williams said, "Many denominational leaders don't know it, but there's a tremendous return to the Bible. Today is the time for old-fashioned evangelism. The youth generation is tired of gimmicks and entertainment. They want the truth and the call to the Saviour."

Williams told about Tom and two friends who flew to Chicago in 1971 and picked up a 1919 Nash to drive to Los Angeles. "As they crossed the country they preached the gospel. In Wichita, Kans., Southeast High School invited them in and they gave their testimonies in class after class after class. The teachers got so excited they invited Tom and his friends to preach in the junior high assemblies across the street.

"In the course of that day a little Jewish girl was converted who happened to lead her synagogue's youth group, and she invited them to the synagogue." Williams interjected, "That would have warmed old Paul's heart, wouldn't it?"

Back to his story, Williams said, "In the high school next day kids were on their knees in the classrooms receiving Christ into their lives.

Kids jam church to hear gospel

"Tom received a call to move in with a Presbyterian pastor to minister through a little mission church in Wichita. A group known as Basic Brothers and Sisters in Christ was formed. The first Saturday night 30 kids were on hand. Four weeks later there were a hundred. Now, Saturday night after Saturday night, an average of 700 kids jam the sanctuary to hear the gospel for two hours, to sing and pray and praise the Lord. Hundreds have been converted."

Speaking on peace, the fourth dimension of youth's idealism, Williams said, "In Jesus Christ the warfare is over and the longing for peace is fulfilled in the human heart to be lived out in society.

Praises Mennos for peace stand

"I would personally express my indebtedness to the brothers and sisters of the Mennonite Church who have been consistent with the gospel of Christ and the revelation of the new covenant in standing against war in any form. You have suffered in this land when that stand was unpopular."

In the closing minutes of his address, Williams answered some of the most often asked questions about Jesus People. "The narrow definition of the Jesus Movement is the spiritual awakening growing out of the youth culture and its characteristic life-style."

Millions of young and old alike consider themselves in the Jesus Movement and there is a tremendous diversity in it, according to Williams, but there are many heretical sects. The Way, at New Knoxville, Ohio, denies the Trinity, the deity of Christ, and the personality of the Holy Spirit. There is also the rigorous monastic group called the Children of God.

Jesus Movement is more than the old fundamentalism

Some have nastily referred to the Jesus Movement as simply a revival of the old fundamentalism. Williams said, "Those in the Jesus Movement believe the Bible to be the Word of God. They are up front and outspoken about their faith. They believe Jesus Christ is the Way, the Truth, and the Life, and that no one comes to the Father but by Him. They believe that the issue of this life is the issue of heaven and hell. Yes, this is all the old fundamentalism.

"But the Jesus Movement isn't the old fundamentalism in a couple important senses. First, it has a great sense of the corporate Christian life, that Jesus Christ is building His church. It isn't the old individualistic Christianity, just Jesus and me going into the African jungles never to be seen again.

"Second, the Jesus Movement is charismatic, willing to receive from God whatever He has to give and not making theological defenses."

Williams said the Jesus Movement does not fear tongues or pouring out of the power of the Holy Spirit. "The power of the Spirit must be manifested if the devil's works today are to be defeated."

Jesus Movement lives by biblical morality

Through the Jesus Movement there is a return to biblical morality in our land. As far as Williams' experience is concerned, premarital and extramarital sex is rejected because the Bible is against it.

To the question, Why the long hair and guitars? Williams said with a chuckle, "Well, dear brothers and sisters, now is the time for Christian charity. We should rejoice that Jesus Christ cleans up the inside and shows His reality through smiling faces, the authentic mask of Jesus Christ, and let it go at that."

Leadership is charismatic, gifted, spiritual

Turning to leadership, Williams said, "There is a new leadership arising in the land we might call charismatic, gifted, and spiritual." It is a contrast to past leadership that has been academically trained and ecclesiastically blessed. He commented, "One of the great questions facing responsible members of the body of Christ is whether the leadership God is giving us can be embraced and accepted."

The dangers of the Jesus Movement are many, and Williams listed faddism, commercialism, leader cults, emotionalism, subjectivism, lack of theological and historical sense, evangelism outrunning Christian nurture and discipleship, divisive movements, heresies, and apocalypticism that denies responsibility for the world.

Jesus Movement has many strengths

But there are also strengths. "Evangelism is done by nonprofessionals, kids who last year were turning their friends on to drugs are turning them on to Jesus this year. The gospel is spreading through lives and changing them, and kids are standing up for Christ wherever they go.

"Second, there is returning to national consciousness the necessity for conversion.

"The prospect for the future is a spiritual awakening unparalleled for the 20th century. As in first century Rome, the Holy Spirit is breaking into human lives and breaking out.

It spreads like fire. Like a good infection.

Holy Spirit power renews the church

"The power of the Holy Spirit is highlighting God's truths that have lain by the side, and the church is being renewed and revived," Larry Christenson said in his opening Bible study at the Festival.

Christenson, pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church of San Pedro, California, and author of Speaking in Tongues with translations in eight languages, said, "The baptism of the Spirit is a great reality to the church today. It has one great purpose: to make the gospel effective.

"When God begins to baptize His church with the Spirit, it's contagious. It spreads like fire. Like a good infection.

"When God begins to do these things, you enter into a life as different from normal human existence as the life of a bird is different from the life of a fish. It lifts you into a new atmosphere, and you begin to deal with the realities of the spiritual world in concrete, practical ways."

Drawing on Emil Brunner's book, The Misunderstanding of the Church, Christenson said the early believers were drawn together as much by "a sense of dynamic power and awe and mystery of God and the Holy Spirit as by the preaching of the gospel.

"It gripped their hearts and lives. And that's what the baptism of the Spirit does today. It alerts you that God is in your midst.

"A unique feature of the Spirit's power is that people's expectations are no longer focused on men, they are focused on God and drawn to Him as by a magnet."

Christenson referred to a crusade in Seattle a year ago when doors and balcony windows were locked because no more persons could get in. "If people hear somebody discoursing a theory about God, a few curious onlookers may be attracted. But if word gets around God is in the midst of people, things are expected to happen.

Spirit is unpredictable

"No one can predict what the power of the Spirit is going to be like until he's in the situation." He pointed to a Sunday-school teacher of junior high students in his congregation who told him one Sunday morning, "'I didn't know how I could take that class but I took it in faith. And I almost stood at the side and listened to myself teach this morning because I wanted to hear what was being said. I had a real sense of being led by the Spirit in a situation I couldn't competently handle.'"

Christenson said that Jesus' disciples had hoped for political or military or ecclesiastical power, but instead they received the power of the Holy Spirit "to be a transforming influence in society."

He applied it to the current day, "You don't have to wait for the church to get a lobby in Washington or the U.N., and you don't have to depend on ecclesiastical or political power or the power of a council of nations."

He pointed to Paul's reminder to the Corinthians: the fishermen of Galilee were men from low ranks of society with no status, yet God was able to fill them with His power.

Many Christians need Spirit's fire

Comparing salvation to a recipe, Christenson said, "The tragedy of the church today is so many Christians are carrying around in their minds the ingredients for salvation — the spiritual laws and truth. What they lack, however, is the fire and the mixing and the power and the energy of Jesus the Baptizer to communicate it."

From personal experience he illustrated his point: "When I graduated from college but before I entered the ministry, I was living under the delusion that all I had to do was lead people through 14 logical arguments and steps of reason and understanding and they would be converted. But it didn't work. They shrugged their shoulders and walked away. Why? The power of the Spirit wasn't there. The first thing I had to recognize was: the gospel cannot be delivered unless power is behind it. That power is a central truth in understanding the doctrine of the baptism of the Holy Spirit."

Larry Christenson, a young Lutheran pastor from California, led four sessions of Bible studies and exposition. One person said of him, "Why, he doesn't talk like a Pentecostal at all. He's so calm."

Love, joy, patience, kindness can be yours

The world will notice the Spirit in your life

A number of original banners were made from felt and other art materials and hung in the Union during Festival weekend. Theme of the workshop was "Let the Spirit speak through art."

"The world is waiting to see Christ made plain in the lives of people. It's tired of philosophies, theories, debates and arguments," Larry Christenson said in his Saturday morning address, "The Fruit of the Spirit."

He told of an effective person-to-person evangelism program in Germany. "It had a basic rule: Do not speak or share anything about Christ until you are asked.

"But that was only half the program. The other rule was: Live so you will be asked."

Christenson described opportunities God gives to help persons live like Christ. "When you make so simple a promise to pick up a loaf of bread for your wife, God expects you to carry it out so that reliability may be produced in you as it was evident in Christ our Lord.

Spirit produces Christ's character

"When you look ahead to work God calls you to, don't grit your teeth and mentally roll up your sleeves and say doggedly, 'I'm going to do it.' Rather, say, 'Thank you, Lord, for this terribly irritating situation. I never could have dreamed up a situation as irritating as this. I know that Christ will be formed in me and that it's all planned out. All I have to do is walk in it. As I do, the Holy Spirit will work in me something of the character of Christ.'"

Pointing to an early and unwise marriage, Christenson told of a woman who married a husband she found out after the honeymoon she didn't love. He said, "Then the thought came to her, 'I am going to act as though I do love him and do the things a loving wife would do.' She was not a hypocrite because she did not kid herself inwardly or to the Lord that she really loved her husband.

"The payoff came years later when she overheard a friend of one of her teenage daughters say, 'You kids are lucky because your father and mother really like each other.'"

Exemplifying the wife, Christenson said the Spirit worked in her heart a love that was real and genuine, and made out of a bad decision something good.

Christenson also gave an example from personal experience. "I was kneeling at the altar of the church in the early morning in private prayer for patience because of my irritations with my family and some members of my congregation and I wanted a new feeling and attitude within myself. As I got up and turned around, who should walk in the back of the church but a woman who irritated the life out of me. She turns me the wrong way; the hair began to go up on the back of my neck.

"I almost said, 'Lord, why did she have to come in now?' And the Lord almost said aloud, 'Son, you prayed for patience. Here's a chance to try it out.'

"The revelation came to me that patience is worked through tribulation. That woman with another of her little irritating projects was precisely what God had prepared beforehand that the fruit of the Spirit could be produced in me."

God sets obstacle courses

Christenson likened God's works to an obstacle course set up by a football coach. "My dad, a coach, in early fall would lay out hill climbs and a series of ropes and other obstacles to get high knee action and the kind of muscular reaction and agility in his athletes to produce the goods on the football field.

"It was all done beforehand because he knew what kind of endurance had to be built up. He wouldn't listen to the athlete who said, 'I'll develop my own program. I have a lot of natural talent.' The youngster simply didn't have the knowledge and background of how he would fit into the team.

"Like the coach in his situation, God knows in His situation how to make the fruit of the Spirit evident. And the gratitude and joy is like the athlete so tired he can hardly walk but says, 'Thanks, coach, it was just what I needed. It takes effort and work but you're building me into something that we need.'"

God controls ripening process

Christenson pointed to a fruit hanging on a tree, "It doesn't have to wiggle and jump around on the branch to mature. It just allows the natural elements God has created to ripen and develop it."

Applying the example to everyday living, he said, "It is impossible for anyone in his human wisdom and understanding to enter into works to produce the fruit of the Spirit. The pattern of human and divine elements to produce what God wants is too subtle, too profound, too impossible for anyone to conceive. You simply have to walk in the way He has prepared. And it will, as young people sometimes say, blow your mind."

From personal experience Christenson recalled how he was a repossessor for a finance company before he entered the ministry. "Living on credit can become burdensome. It's all very nice when you get the new car or refrigerator or furniture suite because at the moment it comes free. But then comes the little payment book. And you have to pay for it and pay for it and pay for it.

"I discovered when I went into the ministry that a lot of people, unfortunately, although raised in the glorious tradition of salvation by grace, are like people living on credit. They say, 'I am saved,' but then they spend the rest of their days trying to pay God back for their salvation, like on an installment plan.

Fruitful life is gift of grace

"What I want to say is: not only is salvation a gift of grace, but sanctification — the life that becomes fruitful in the Spirit — is also a gift of grace. You move from underneath the time payment mentality and walk in the Spirit in freedom.

"Of course, the works of the flesh are always trying to draw you back into life filled with slavery, bondage, immorality, impurity, licentiousness, idolatry, sorcery, the occult and witchcraft, personal animosities, hostility, dissension, party spirit, jealousy, envy, drunkenness, rowdiness, carousing, and all the rest.

"But the baptism of the Holy Spirit will impart to you the supernatural character of Jesus — love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, gentleness, and self-control."

If you want to be selfless

Pray for Spirit's gifts

"The most selfless thing you can do is pray earnestly for the gifts of the Spirit," Larry Christenson said in his Saturday evening address, "Gifts to Build the Community of the Spirit."

"You seek the gifts not for your own glory, but to express God's love to meet human needs that cannot be met by human resources. And when you pray, understand that your prayers will be answered."

Christenson said, "God wants His church to be equipped to do the work of Jesus according to need. If your congregation receives from you only what you have by natural gift and ability, it will receive precious little.

"It is God's intention that you share the uncommon and supernatural things of heaven. Part of His purpose is to quicken people's desire, whet their appetites, give them a foretaste, and make them eager for the age to come. The reason heaven is wonderful is because we taste its powers in His church today.

Motive is important

"One must carefully think about his motive in praying for gifts — whether wisdom, knowledge, faith, healing, working of miracles, prophecy, discernment, tongues. God gives His gifts to carry out His love, to make His love practical and effective in His ministry on earth.

"Why do I want to lay hands on the sick? Because the love of Christ wants to reach out to that person and see him healed.

"Why do I want to speak the word of wisdom? Because Christ in His love wants to end confusion."

Illustrating further the meanings of power and love in everyday situations, Christenson said, "Power, that's my car. Love, that's giving my teenage son the keys to the car when he has a date."

Likening this to the Spirit's work, he said, "The sick person receives the gift of healing. I just deliver it. It is the same for the person in confusion who receives the word of wisdom. I just deliver it. It's all done in love.

Full spectrum of gifts for congregations

"Scripture and experience in today's charismatic movement do not support the idea that every Christian must prophesy, or speak in tongues, or heal. But scripture and experience do make it possible to say: in congregations where Jesus is proclaimed as the One who pours out His Spirit, then there should be those who have healing gifts, and tongues gifts, and gifts of interpretation.

"Every congregation should have the full spectrum of God's gifts to minister to the full spectrum of human need. These gifts are not for dilettantes or for people with kooky interests or for people on a fanatical binge. Rather, these gifts are genuine moves of the Spirit to restore power to today's church as demonstrated in the days of the early church, and to lift the expectations of God's people."

Material in the four speeches by Larry Christenson, which are summarized into articles in this Bulletin, is part of a series of taped messages in cassette form. Cassettes are available from Bethany Fellowship, 6820 Auto Club Road, Minneapolis, MN 55431.

Union Auditorium was filled to capacity for the five mass sessions. A Saturday night youth service to midnight was also held in the Union.

A major part of the Festival was 29 Search and Share groups, most meeting four times to give persons a chance to take part on a variety of topics. Each group met about 1 1/2 hours with the first half hour usually given to singing, prayer, and personal sharing.

For gifts of the Spirit to be effective

'Higher gifts' needed by congregations

"Congregations must have the 'higher gifts' so that other gifts will come into full fruition and be fully effective in the church," Larry Christenson said in his fourth and final Bible study of the weekend.

His topic required delicate treatment because renewal movements on the one hand have often rejected "the higher gifts" of "first, apostles; second, prophets; third, teachers; and fourth, evangelists." On the other hand, the church historically has suppressed the gifts of the Holy Spirit — prophecy, miracles, healing, tongues, and interpretations — because they are volatile, tend to upset the status quo, and jam the smooth functioning of ecclesiastical machinery.

The Sunday afternoon address centered in two theses. "First, the church needs the gifts and the fresh outpouring of the Holy Spirit and the upsurge of its spiritual power and alertness. Second, the charismatic movement with its great proliferation of enthusiasm, dynamics, power and gifts of the Spirit needs the church and its gifts of Christ — the offices of supervision and authority to shepherd, guide, and administer."

Clarifying the multiple ministry described by the gifts of Christ, Christenson compared it to a team of individuals who serve, or minister. "The word 'minister' in the New Testament really means 'deacon' and does not mean the leadership of a single individual. It is a tragedy that 'minister' has come to mean 'pastor,' the ordained man who preaches the sermon and is in charge of the local congregation.

The elder ministers to the flock

"The ministry of an apostle would probably be close to what we would call an elder today. The elder is the person with an overview, a responsibility for the flock and for its fellowship with other flocks, for seeing that authority is set in the congregation so there is not anarchy.

"The elder also ministers to persons and speaks words of exhortation to them. His ministry is needed in each person's life so that the church may be built up and come to maturity in Christ. It is not possible for a person to get to God's destination by himself alone with Jesus and the Holy Spirit. It requires more — like membership in the body of Christ plus the ministry of an apostle, or elder, at given moments in life. The person must find out what it means to be structured in the body of Christ.

Italian girls launch renewal movement

Christenson told about a renewal movement in the Italian Roman Catholic Church begun by a small group of teenage girls in bomb shelters who had seen everything earthly taken away. They asked themselves, 'What is there left?' and they concluded, 'The one thing left is our hope in God.'

"They came into fellowship, rented a house, lived together, shared their life together. During the day they were secretaries and factory workers, but at night they invited people in to share what they were finding in the gospel.

"Some of their mommas didn't think their commitment to this way of life was proper. After all, the girls should be getting married. So the mommas complained to the bishop, who promptly told a monsignor to check up, straighten the girls out, and get them back in the normal life of society.

"The monsignor spotchecked their lives and found them good Catholics. They went daily to mass and attended all regular obligations of the church. He began to test them, and challenged them at the point of obedience. He would sometimes give an order and they would begin to carry it out and when they were halfway done he would reverse himself and send them off in another direction.

"This went on for two years. Then he reported to his bishop, 'I cannot find anything to complain about in these girls. They are good Catholics. I wish we had more like them.'"

Christenson said because the girls were willing to submit themselves at a critical stage to that kind of discipline, the door opened for their lay movement to spread. Today it has many stations in Europe and several in North and South America.

Every member must be open to the elder's work

Christenson confessed to uneasiness when he hears a person in the charismatic movement say, "I don't listen to men. I just follow the Lord." What the person is really saying, he said, is: "I don't listen to anyone else. I listen to what I understand to be the truth at this point in my spiritual development."

He commented, "That person is setting himself up as a final authority. It's impossible to separate the Bible from personal interpretation which is involved in reading it, but when one makes absolute his own understanding of the Bible he simply freezes himself.

"What I plead for is: the person who is warmed by the Spirit of God must recognize his need for God's Spirit to work upon him through an elder from time to time.

The elder works quietly and with love

"Regardless of the structure — be it conference or bishop or whatever — every congregation has the need to be dealt with, molded and shaped by the Spirit acting through that office set up in the church. It's not a question of whether the offices can be improved upon. Nor is it a question of not wanting to look at the kind of leadership given to the church. Rather, it is the matter that we were never meant to come to maturity apart from the interplay of these offices set up in the church. The Spirit's gifts and ministries don't develop naturally; they require cultivation and the guidance of an elder to fit everything into place in the body of Christ."

Christenson again carefully illustrated this sensitive point.

"A Jewish lady, a convert to Christianity, said to me after visiting our prayer group meeting one day in 1962, 'You know, as pastor of a congregation, you have to guide your people, see that the manifestations of the Spirit take place so that the body will be built up. You do not simply give license to any person to do what he feels moved to do.

"'That's a mistake we made in my denomination. People would speak out. We were so afraid of quenching the Spirit we would let a person just do anyting he felt moved to do. One man, I remember, would bray like a donkey. That was his tongue, so he thought. Nobody ever mustered the courage and love to go quietly to him and tell him, "You know, the Holy Spirit is a dove, not a jackass."

The Spirit cannot be quenched

"'Another person, a woman, had the gift of tongues and would interrupt the sermon with an outbreak. But the pastor, handling it with the wisdom of an elder, visited her. The first thing he did was rejoice with her, "You know, we're so happy you've received this blessing. I know it's going to make a great difference in your life."

"'Then he went on to say, "You know, there are times in a service when the utterance in tongues is appropriate and times when not. If you get the leading to speak, just wait; it won't go away. Then when the time comes, if it's still there you can bring it forth. If it's not, maybe it means you are to be praying silently in the Spirit to encourage the Word being preached.

"'Then the woman broke into tears. "Oh," she said, "that's a relief. Somewhere I picked up the erroneous teaching that if I didn't speak out, I'd quench the Spirit."'"

The prophet's ministry depends on the elders

Moving to the ministry of the prophet, Christenson said, "The prophet goes into the heights and brings down a word from God. But I often think once he gets hold of it, he doesn't know what to do with it. Sometimes he's so tuned to God he's out of tune with men. His intense concentration for spiritual truth and for hearing what God is saying keeps him from being caught in the clamor and business of running the congregation.

"But it's important to recognize how dependent his ministry is on the elders. When a prophet receives something from God, he turns it over to the elders to see how it fits into the total life of the congregation."

Modern day prophets guided fundraising

Recalling a point in his life when he needed the direction and guidance of a prophet, Christenson said, "At one time my congregation wanted to add a building to the church property because our 90 young persons were crowded into a small area on Wednesday nights and had to borrow space from a Jewish synagogue across the street to take care of another 40 teenagers.

"The building was going to cost $100,000. We had only 200 adult members, and that was a good bit of money. We prayed. We wondered about raising funds in the congregation.

"Then word came to a few persons in the congregation that we shouldn't visit people. We should just trust God.

"We'd never done things quite that way. But one morning in June, 1969, after we'd been praying for a year, I went to my office and under the mail slot on the floor was a brown manila envelope. I opened it and saw a $1000 bill. Then I saw four more. And there were bundles of $100 bills. I dumped it all out. I counted $25,000 in cash."

Then he stated parenthetically to the delight of the audience, 'You'll notice I've got quite a bit of gray hair. Well, I got half of it that morning."

On the envelope was written II Corinthians 6, he reported. "Two verses, one at the beginning of the chapter and one at the end, caught my attention. They spoke directly to the questions of when should we begin and whether we should visit people. The words came to me, 'Now is the acceptable time'; it was late spring and there was no reason to wait until fall when people are home from vacation. To the second question came the words, 'I will live in them and move among them, and I will be their God.'

"I said to somebody the next day, 'The Lord gave us a nudge in the direction He wanted us to go.' And he replied, "That was no nudge. That was a kick in the pants.'

"Some more words of prophecy came that very day. The gifts would come in. The building would be completed without a normal fundraising drive.

"And it worked out. When the building was dedicated, there was a tremendous joy because the people felt God had done something among them."

Elders will not squelch the Spirit

In closing, Christenson stressed again that the wisdom to use the gift does not necessarily come with a gift of the Holy Spirit. "That's the whole reason the Apostle Paul tells us to desire earnestly the higher gifts of overseeing the body so the body will become not a series of individuals who have had experiences, but rather a living organism."

His final example was action taken by Roman Catholic bishops a couple years ago upon consideration of the movement of God's Holy Spirit in their churches.

"They issued a one-page document. They said, in effect, it's of God. It's scriptural. It's increased the prayer life of the people. We encourage it.

"Then they cited cautions. It was quite proper. That's what an elder should do. He should sound the note of warning when needed.

"But the bishops didn't squelch the Spirit. They said, 'We advise bishops to involve prudent priests in this movement so that it has proper pastoral leadership.'

"Tremendous. There's nothing I find that people in the charismatic movement really want more than to be guided and shepherded. Because truth without authority leads to emptiness, meaninglessness, hopelessness. I believe God wants His people today to show the world what it means to live happily, freely, under Christ's authority, and under those ministers He has put in His church."

Mary Oyer (center), song leader of the Festival, explains the Festival of the Holy Spirit Song Book:

A collection of about 25 songs expanded to 120 after representatives from Campus Church, Associated Seminaries, and College music faculty drew together a broad range of songs to supplement The Mennonite Hymnal.

Included in the book are songs about the Holy Spirit, plus songs from scripture. Some are the result of a great outburst of song during the recent revival in the Roman Catholic Church when it moved from Latin to English. A few songs, the singing of scripture from the King James Version, came from the Charismatic movement.

Also in the book are "new" folk songs, written in the last 10 years. Sydney Carter's are an example.

Others are "old" folk songs, like a Shaker song Sydney Carter used for "The Lord of the Dance."

There are a number of Black spirituals and a few Black gospel songs.

The newest songs in the book are the songs from students. Finally, there is a category called "pop" or "children's" songs.

The song book was a venture in faith. Five thousand copies were printed at minimal cost. Part of the venture was a community approach to the finishing operations. Stacks of pages were put on tables in the west half of the Union gym and persons walked around and around, collating the pages, and then binding them together.

Editor's Note: The publishing committee is grateful for the overwhelming response to the song book. Because the printing is sold out, a reprint is being considered.

Won't die out in 10 or 15 years

Current renewal is different from other revivals

In the weekend's final address, "Living in the Power of the Spirit," Nelson Litwiller said, "We're experiencing a revival with a difference.

"It's a revival not of theological debate — like how many angels can dance on the point of a needle. Rather, it's a revival with emphasis on experience.

"In the second place, it's not a revival limited to regions. This revival is clearly world-wide.

"And third, it gives me much hope that the renewal is not centering around any individual. It's the Spirit of God moving among His people. And it is not wild fire that will die out in 10 or 15 years."

Go and show God's power in your life

Litwiller said he was convinced that living and walking in the power of the Spirit will bring about new witnessing and action in individuals and congregations. "Just as Jesus' life on earth can be understood only as we understand the role of the Spirit in His life, so the key in our lives will be the Spirit doing exactly the same things.

"What I'm saying is, praise God. Be God's man. Be re-created. Be a new creature. Take your stand and take your charge. Do God's work.

"You're not weak worms of the dust, and don't whine and grovel in it. You're cleansed by God. You're justified before God as though you'd never sinned. Now go, show God's power in your life. That's what walking and living in the power of the Spirit means.

"When the Word is spoken, signs and wonders of the power of the Spirit will accompany it. That has been going on here at the festival. People have been delivered. People have been healed.

Age and feebleness require miracles

"I do not have patience with those dear friends who say that the miracles and signs were for the church when she was young and weak. I'll agree that the church then was young and weak. But let me ask you, What do you do when a church gets old and feeble?"

Picking up a sheaf of letters he has received in the past year from persons who have been depressed, Litwiller read one from a wife, "I have been discouraged and frustrated with family life and church life and our own Christian life. I had poor devotional life. I had legalistic feelings. I had resentments against my husband and found myself wishing for the good old days when we didn't fight. Now, with God and the Holy Spirit, there is an inner joy that we did not know was possible. I would be mad at myself, mad at my children, and mad at my husband, but now motherhood is a joy.'"

Action of Holy Spirit replaces lifelessness

Litwiller said, "It is sufficient to say that lifeless institutionalism, a restructuration of organizations and a multiplication of study committees are being replaced by the ceaseless action of the Holy Spirit. And we're also witnessing spiritual hunger and discomfort of the masses.

"At the same time there are those who look at the renewal movement and say with scholarly detachment, 'I couldn't care less.' Some have dogmatic hostility, 'It's all of the devil, especially tongues.' And there is institutional expediency, 'Don't rock the boat.' And ecclesiastical condescension, 'It's not relevant to our task.' There are still bishops who hint darkly at schizophrenia. And there are cynics who convene inquisitorial commissions. I even have an anonymous friend, who I suppose is concerned for my spiritual welfare, who sent me a book with this sentence, 'It becomes more and more clear that maybe over 95 per cent of the whole tongues movement is mediumistic in character.'"

Fulness of Spirit leads to peace and joy

Litwiller suggested a caution: "The visitation and renewal of the Spirit is not a short cut to holiness and sanctification.

Speaking from personal experience, he said: "The fulness of the Spirit merely opens you up for a tremendous potential. If you think the baptism of the Spirit is a spiritual status symbol, you can forget it.

"Rather, it is a door into a charismatic dimension. It is limitless in growth. The more you live in the Spirit, the more you're aware you know so little and there's so much to learn.

"The experience has led me into a deep sense of humility and awareness of dependency on the Lord. I praise the Lord for peace, joy, victory, conviction, and deliverance of fear and the things that used to bug me."

Ecumenism marks renewal movement

Litwiller said he sees beyond God's work and zeal to "a true ecumenicity, or unity in the body of Christ."

Admitting this is a delicate subject, Litwiller continued, "On the day of Pentecost the church was one. But since then we have the tragic story of continual fragmentation. It is becoming obvious, however, through today's charismatic renewal that God is healing breaches and wounds in a way and in places never thought possible.

"Walls of separation that have divided people who were equally loved by Christ are crumbling. Fear, suspicion, ignorance, and hatred are being replaced by trust, confidence, understanding, and acceptance. Roman Catholics who have experienced Holy Spirit renewal testify to finding mutual love and acceptance with protestant Pentecostals and Neo-pentecostals. I thank the Lord that the Holy Spirit is gathering extreme fundamentalists, conservative evangelicals, Roman Catholics together, praying, worshiping, rejoicing, studying the Word.

"I remember the World Council of Churches meeting in Evanston in 1954. Somebody asked the then Archbishop of Canterbury, 'What did you accomplish?' And he answered, 'We accomplished absolutely nothing, but we did it marvelously well.' I want to say and I say it with respect: what the ecumenical movement could not and did not do in 50 years despite many well-intentioned efforts, the Spirit of God today is doing in a way never thought of.

Unity in Christ is not a human achievement

"Only the Holy Spirit can cut through cultural and denominational barriers, unite men and women in Christ. This is no human achievement. This is more than momentary enthusiasm. It is an ever deepening fellowship."

Litwiller quoted Kevin Ranaghan, Roman Catholic writer, "'The Lord has used the service of brothers and sisters in Christ from denominations other than Roman Catholics to initiate, to nourish, to mature us.' He confesses the Pentecostals have helped them.

"Let me say, in all fairness, that the Catholic movement has exerted the most salutary effect on the entire charismatic renewal and has noticeably changed the mood of Pentecostalism. In it is found the very essence of Pentecost. It has the same signs and wonders of the Spirit but in a gentler, more quiet, and less demonstrative way than in the heyday of the classical Pentecostals with excessive emotionalism and fanaticism."

Unity in love, fellowship, and purpose is possible

Acknowledging the 17 kinds of Mennonites who took part in Probe '72 and 130 denominations taking part in Key '73, plus other differences in Christendom, Litwiller said, "Church history relates how divisions, based on deep convictions founded on the Word, came into being. These convictions need not be forfeited, or hidden, or covered up, or played down, or pushed into oblivion. But I have discovered there can be a unity in love, in fellowship, and in purpose in serving Jesus Christ."

Pointing to a recent personal experience, Litwiller reported, "At a prayer meeting at Notre Dame the other Wednesday evening I testified it took me 74 years to learn that God loves the Catholics just as much as He loves the Mennonites. But in the same breath I said, 'I'm not so sure there might be some Catholics here yet who still aren't convinced the Lord loves these heretical Anabaptists just as much as He loves the Catholics.' And they all cooed, 'We love you, we love you.'"

Life in the Spirit may affect material possessions

At the close Litwiller explained the most radical point of his address. "Walking and living in the Spirit in our affluent age is going to affect our pocketbooks sooner or later.

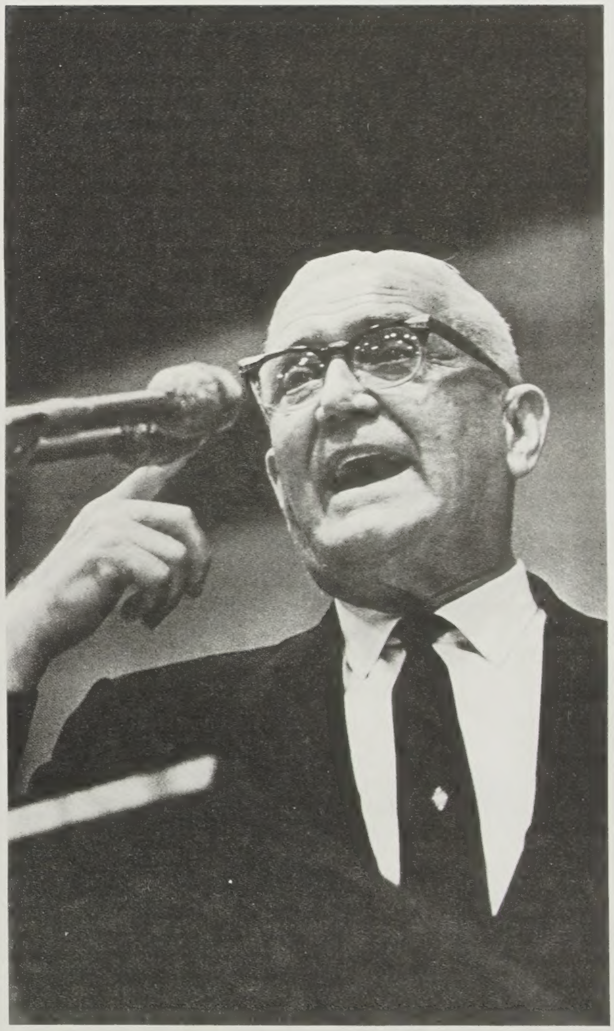
"One cannot read the account of Pentecost without noticing the attitudes toward material possessions and the tremendous contrasts with our current day private enterprise, economic, competitive, and oft times predatory system. I know there are some among us who are conscience stricken because of the taxes on our high incomes which our government uses to finance immoral wars. I know we're embarrassed and feel inwardly condemned when many of our modern homes border on the luxurious in contrast to the inadequate conditions of millions of homeless, hungry, sick, and naked refugees in many parts of the world today.

"Has the spirit of the times infiltrated the church in the handling of material things as well as in other areas? Have we become slaves to the material things which in reality impoverish life? Has there ever been more misery in our world than in the midst of our material abundance?

The spiritual is supreme over the material

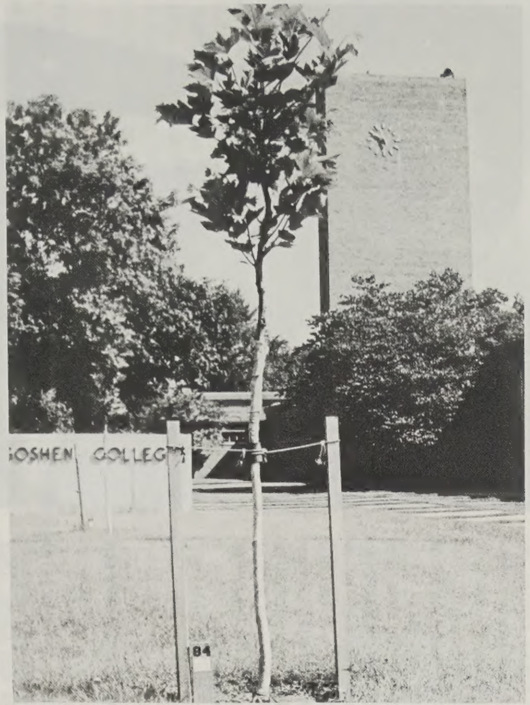
"Following the Pentecostal effusion of the Spirit the believers sold their farms and lands. That material fellowship and sharing was the outward sign of a spiritual fellowship between regenerate men and women. That fellowship was rich. It meant communion, communication, distribution, contribution, and partnership.

"The believers were of one heart and soul because they had yielded selflessly to the Lordship of Christ. Because they believed the spiritual was supreme over the material, life in the Spirit made property secondary. There was no compulsion, no rules. The movement was spiritual."



Litwiller, lifetime missionary to Latin America, was the final speaker.

The trees grow in Goshen



The more than 130 trees planted last October 30 by alumni, congregational representatives, faculty, students, and friends as a high light of President Burkholder's inauguration have taken root and are growing.

In the year intervening and especially during the dry summer months they were well cared for, fertilized, and watered.

Now, one year later, they are already beautifying the campus and adding to its quiet, wooded informality.

FESTIVAL OF THE HOLY SPIRIT

An emphasis on art, history, religion, philosophy, literature and music along with profession-oriented courses helps students appreciate the Christian world view, the liberal arts tradition, peace and international understanding, and the search for true community.

Goshen "for . . ."

In his Letters and Papers from Prison, Dietrich Bonhoeffer, the famous German theologian who was hanged by the Nazis, referred to Jesus as the "man for others." This expression does not say everything about Jesus that needs to be said. However, it does set forth the basic Christian truth that the purpose of life is to live for other persons.

Goshen College is attempting to fashion a curriculum and encourage a life-style which enables young persons to be servants of mankind. We want them to be concerned for the poor, the ill, the elderly, and the oppressed.

We want them to develop a philosophy of life that results in personal integrity and an extraordinary quality of care for others. Our ideal is to produce teachers who really put themselves out for their students, doctors who are concerned about care for the ill as individuals, lawyers who sense the needs for equality in society, businessmen who are responsive to humanity's deepest needs and desires. Students are urged to moderate their demands for security and luxury. The life to which they are called is intended to contain elements of risk and adventure.

There have been times in the past when only monks, ministers, and missionaries were expected to live sacrificial lives. Today, however, Goshen is preparing persons to serve society sacrificially in everyday life, especially through the professions.

Service to others in overseas setting

Emphasis upon service is made concrete through a unique program of international education called the Study-Service Trimester abroad. Accordingly, students spend 14 weeks in a foreign country studying the culture and getting involved on the field with the country's attempt to solve its problems of poverty, health care, education, agriculture, or community development. During the past four years more than 1100 students and faculty have gone to such countries as Haiti, Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Honduras, Jamaica, and Republic of Korea where they have lived with families and helped in schools, hospitals, community centers, and orphanages. From this kind of experience students are presented with a life-style which affects their scale of values and plans for the future.

In addition, Goshen is concerned that its students have opportunity to take part in voluntary service in the community and thus help in the future development of Elkhart County. Students give their help and energies at Aux Chandelles, Bashor Home, Boys' Club of Goshen, community day care centers, Elkhart County Home, the Juvenile Detention Center, Gospel Lighthouse, Greencroft Nursing Center and Villa, Teen Haven, and at local public schools in their tutoring programs. Others are "big brothers" or "big sisters" to grade-school children, leaders at children's Bible study hour, or volunteers for the Youth for Christ Lifeline clubhouse.

Competence and humility for the future

At the same time, our ideal of service must be accompanied by the ideal of competence. We want our students to be able to think, innovate, to dip into the accumulated wisdom of the world, and to be alert and ready to respond to the inevitable changes in society that will confront them. We want them to appreciate the Christian world view, the liberal arts tradition, peace and international understanding, and the search for true community. Hence, Goshen emphasizes history, religion, philosophy, art, literature, and music along with profession-oriented courses.

An underlying conviction of Goshen College is that many of the major problems of civilization are moral and spiritual in nature. Not only crime but also inflation, racism, pollution and exploitation of nature are extensions of man's unlimited greed. The desire to exceed others and secure oneself against any possible eventuality, even by trampling on the neighbor, is what leads to wars and violence. If the world is to survive during the technological age, a new professional man and woman must emerge — a professional who transcends the dog-eat-dog struggle for survival by offering himself to his neighbor in humble service.

This is what Goshen College is trying to stress. To the extent that the college is successful, it contributes to the moral and spiritual strength of the world.

Needed: stability for educational program

Goshen College's most pressing need at this stage of its history is financial stability. As a private institution without public subsidy, it is almost entirely dependent on income from tuition and from annual, special and deferred gifts. Therefore, to preserve the gains of the past, provide financial equilibrium when enrollment fluctuates, and improve the quality of education, the college is launching a five-year development program described in overview in this Bulletin. It is hoped that by 1977 at the end of the program, all or nearly all the goals set forth will have been achieved.

With the accomplishment of the goals, the college can continue strongly into the latter part of the 20th century as an institution for all whom it serves — rich and poor, young and old, Americans and foreign peoples. Goshen College is an institution "for" the world and wants to stress that its students live and, if needs be, die, for others whether they be friends or enemies.

The plans and what it will take

The five-year development program is an open-ended one with no upper limits. It affects every part of the college to benefit students and prepare them for service to others. The goals of the program are listed below, in order of importance.

How does one dramatize day-to-day operations except by showing students and teacher in a learning situation. Last year more than $1.8 million was spent for salaries and wages to cover this vital part of the college's program. Not only did funds come from tuition income, but credit also goes to church, alumni, business and industry, community, and foundations for their gifts. Support for operations is lifeblood for the college.

1. OPERATIONS

The first goal is for a balanced operating budget each year. Currently $600 a year a student, in addition to the tuition he pays, is needed to cover all his educational costs and the day-to-day operations of the college. Because an enrollment of 1200 a year was assumed for each year of the five-year program, the total amount, which figures to $3.6 million, required for operations is a sizable sum. Since the present endowment of the college is small, gifts for operations is of highest priority. It is lifeblood.

2. ENDOWMENT FOR OPERATIONS

In the long run, improvement in the quality of education, not to speak of survival of the college, depends on a layer of income producing capital. Endowment is not only a hedge against inflation but gives the college a margin of security in the face of changing cultural patterns and student moods. It provides financial equilibrium during temporary enrollment fluctuations. It gives stability to existing programs and provides for their year in, year out operation. Further, there are certain emphases which can be guaranteed in the future only if they have been secured by continuous financial support. Hence, gifts are proposed for the following areas:

Endowment — whether for library, teachers' salaries, laboratory kindergarten, or for college-funded scholarships for worthy students — provides valuable annual income to free operations funds for other uses. Endowment gives the college a layer of income-producing capital, a margin of security against the future.

Book funds, to provide annual income for acquiring books and journals in the library	$1,000,000
Library operations, to provide annual income for salaries and services of the library	1,000,000
Menno Simons Scholarships, to provide annual income so outstanding students with limited funds can attend college	200,000
Scholarships for international students, to provide annual income for tuition and support of qualified students from overseas	1,000,000
Scholarships for needy students, to provide outright gift aid to students with college ability but who come from homes of unusual financial circumstances	2,000,000
Laboratory kindergarten, to undergird an important part of the preparation of students in child development, social service, home economics, and elementary education	100,000
Center for Discipleship, to provide regular income for translating the biblical message to the contemporary social scene	500,000
Ernest E. Miller Professorship in Intercultural Education, to further the College's efforts for world-wide Christian service	350,000
Sanford C. Yoder Professorship in Christian Responsibility, to perpetuate the ideals of Christian service	350,000
Projects for Alumni Creativity, to promote originality in art, music, and writing by former students, on an annual basis	100,000

3. REMODELING AND "RECYCLING" OF CURRENT FACILITIES

With time, existing buildings need to be repaired, renovated, or "recycled" to keep them contemporary and functional. The preservation and improvement of property is an obligation not only to those who contributed for the building in the first place, but also for future usefulness and economy. The college's three-trimester, year-round program becomes more attractive to students as more classrooms, laboratories, and social rooms are air-conditioned for the hot, humid summers. The campus is attractive, though practical and unostentatious. The goal is to make it an even more beautiful and useful context for learning.

Remodeling and "recycling" of existing current facilities achieves two objectives: it preserves and improves the buildings made possible by past donors, and second, it makes the building more useful and economical for the future.

Temperature and humidity control of Science Hall (estimated cost)	$ 80,000
Remodeling and refurbishing of Memorial Library for an art production center for two-dimensional and three-dimensional media (estimated cost)	80,000
Remodeling of Alumni Memorial Dining Room to provide temperature and humidity control and to build small, private dining rooms (estimated cost)	250,000
Temperature and humidity control in snackshop and bookstore (estimated cost)	15,000
Remodeling of Seminary Building into a conference center (estimated cost)	100,000
Remodeling of President's Home (estimated cost)	10,000
Remodeling of ground floor of Kulp Hall for business education center (estimated cost)	7,000
Completion of remodeling of Administration Building (estimated cost)	80,000

4. CAPITAL PROJECTS

Several new buildings are needed. At the present time, the educational process is cramped for space and social life is inhibited by lack of facilities for informal interaction.

In addition to the cost of each project, an endowment gift is required to provide for annual maintenance, janitorial services, heat, and lighting, so that these expenses are not a burden to the overall annual operations budget for educational purposes.

Little drama "barn." Among the most pressing needs is a drama center. Drama is becoming an increasingly important means of communication. Many students are more deeply moved by ideas mediated by the dramatic form than through dispassionate speech and statistics.

At the present time, students are using the first floor of the "Old (Memorial) Library" for rehearsals. However, this space is urgently needed for an expanding program of the art department.

After thorough investigation of drama centers in Europe and America, the college wishes to build a drama facility in the shape of a barn. A barn would not only provide a relatively inexpensive structure but it would correspond to a current fascination among students and dramatic artists for the adaptation of barns for drama purposes.

The college wants to build a barn on the campus in keeping with the Mennonite-Amish tradition of beauty and thrift. A barn would symbolize Mennonite agricultural heritage and the virtues of honesty and rugged simplicity. The drama center would also contain a center for informal, relaxed social interaction.

Estimated cost for building the "barn" is $150,000. Endowment to provide regular income for its annual operations and upkeep is also $150,000.

Physical education center. The college's physical education facilities need also to be expanded. Currently its indoor physical education program is confined to the gym in the Union building. But there is considerable tightness in scheduling the gym because of the physical education service classes, intramural contests, the intercollegiate athletics program, and the need for informal, unorganized recreation by students. The use of the gym floor is frequently booked solid from 6 a.m. to midnight. Therefore, the college proposes the building of a recreation center for more versatility in the physical education program and flexibility in scheduling. The center would provide year-round tennis courts and facilities for wrestling, volleyball, and games. It would be similar to an industrial-type building for utility and relatively low cost.

A center of this type would express the college philosophy of physical education as "recreation." Emphasis is placed not primarily on spectator sports but on participation by all students. The purpose of physical education is to play for enjoyment and for the development of skills which can be carried into later periods of life.

Estimated cost of the physical education center is $315,000. An endowment gift of $315,000 will provide for its annual operations and upkeep.

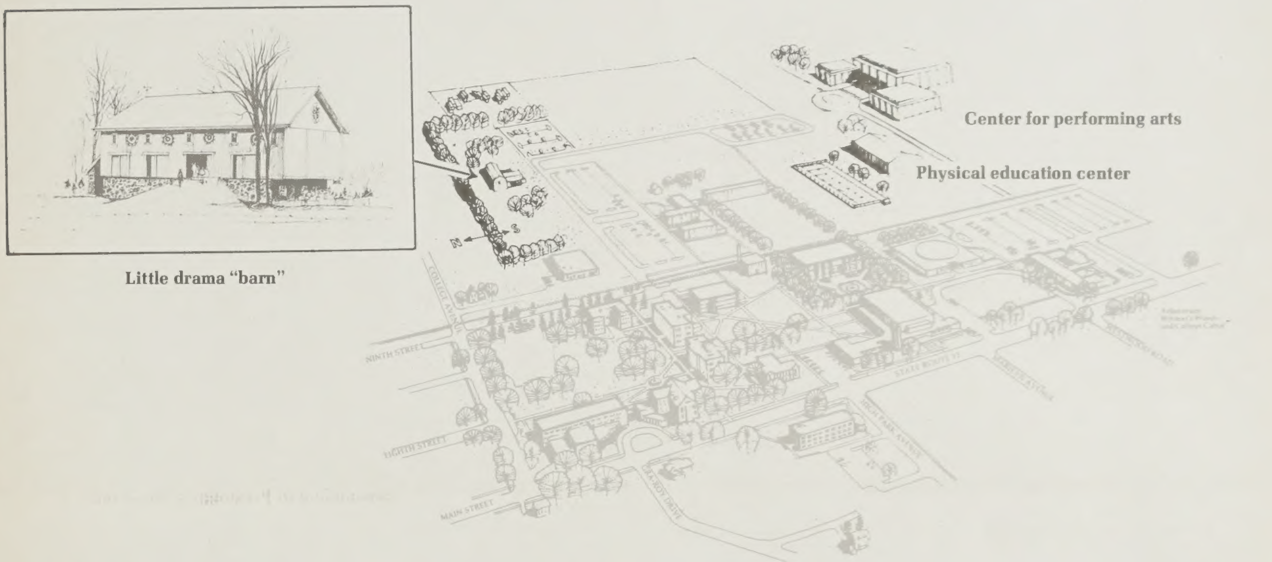
Center for performing arts. The purpose of the proposed center for the performing arts is not only to provide facilities for the college but also to serve as a culture center. It would consist primarily of an auditorium large enough for music concerts, dramatic productions, and other events for large audiences.

The building would also provide space for the department of music, including practice studios, a pipe organ, classrooms, and offices.

In addition, the building would include facilities for the department of communication. WGCS radio station, TV and speech laboratories, and classrooms and offices would be located in the building, as would an art gallery.

The college believes that an appropriate parallel to today's outstanding agricultural and industrial development is cultural development in music, art and drama. The profusion of the arts along with industrial growth is necessary to maintain the "ecological balance" of modern technological society. The college desires to promote religious and cultural traditions and a cultural center on its campus would both symbolize and promote this objective.

Estimated cost for the center is $3,500,000. An endowment gift of $2,500,000 to provide regular income for its annual operations and upkeep would also be needed.



Little drama "barn"

Although they are fourth in priority in the five-year development program, three buildings have been proposed and sited on the campus. Each will be developed further by an architect and contractor only when money is in hand both for its construction and for endowment of its annual operations. Because of this endowment income, the regular operations of the buildings will not require annual help from the college's overall operating budget, to which gifts and church offerings are channeled every year to make up the difference between tuition income and total educational costs.

A future beyond the ordinary

By J. LAWRENCE BURKHOLDER

Goshen's five-year program reflects, paradoxically, a conservative financial policy and an imaginative educational philosophy. It is intended first of all to make sure that the college survives. At the same time it means that Goshen refuses to get historically stuck. Goshen intends to remain a throbbing, innovative institution, second to none of its kind. We are convinced that it is possible to move ahead of the times without jeopardizing the fundamental stability of the college. Underlying the five-year plan are carefully considered policies and an ordering of priorities which will enable Goshen to move steadily, surely and responsibly toward a greater future.

For one thing we have no intention of involving the college in debt for non-income producing properties. Our policy is to build only as we have the money in hand. Furthermore, all capital projects will be undertaken only if they are endowed. This means that physical growth will not be permitted to jeopardize the fiscal integrity of the college.

It should also be pointed out that emphasis will be placed first of all on annual contributions for operations expenses. This is nothing new. For a number of years the church, alumni, friends, the community and foundations have contributed on an annual basis. In recent years annual giving has increased substantially. The very existence of the college depends upon the faithful, generous support of many persons, industries and foundations that send annual checks. Significantly more money for operations will be needed in the years to come but we are confident that the Goshen constituency is equal to the challenge.

Emphasis will also be placed upon improvement of Goshen's endowment. The experts are telling us that in the long run (10 to 20 years from now) survival of private institutions will depend increasingly upon the accumulation of invested capital. What this means is that Goshen needs to become the beneficiary of a number of large estates and many smaller deferred gifts through wills, annuities, trusts and insurance policies. Goshen will hopefully benefit by an increasingly accepted idea that the beneficiaries of estates, especially large ones, should include institutions as well as sons and daughters and relatives.

We are thrilled at the possibility of making the Goshen experience more effective and of improving our course of studies. We are confident that there are individuals and foundations who have the resources and believe enough in Goshen to make our dreams come true — including the updating of our current physical facilities, and the addition of new buildings such as the drama "barn," physical education center, and performing arts center.

The five-year plan should not be conceived as a high pressure campaign in the usual sense. The heart of it is the annual alumni program, and regular church and community support. This is nothing new in principle. It is new only in the sense of urgency with which we view the need for funds for operations. In addition we will approach certain individuals and foundations for large amounts for capital growth and endowment money for its maintenance.

The philosophy which has evolved is, we believe, financially and theologically sound. We keep our feet on the ground while we believe in a gracious God of mystery and bounty.

What it means to give a gift

For some, giving is a creative act. It brings into existence what did not exist before. It may be a building, a scholarship, a tree, or an art gallery.

For others, giving is an investment. It is intended to bring returns for many years to come. Theoretically, endowment lasts until the end of time.

For others, giving is a new relationship. Persons who give to Goshen College are lifelong friends.

For others, giving is an act of religious devotion. Having been blessed, they express gratitude to the Eternal Father for His goodness.

For others, giving is to divest oneself of the unnecessary weight of unneeded possessions. Money is a blessing but for some it becomes a needless burden.

For others, giving is a prudent way to exercise one's control over his possessions while he is alive. To pass on without a planned estate may mean that one's life savings are left to the disposition of the public.

For others, giving is an opportunity to benefit future generations.

Among the ways to give to Goshen College are: cash gifts through your congregation's stewardship program or through special offerings, and gifts to the alumni annual fund.

Other suggestions for gifts are: appreciated securities and property, life insurance, bequest in a will, charitable gift annuity, life income agreement, charitable remainder unitrust, charitable remainder annuity trust, life estate contract, and revocable gift agreement.
